Mothers Order Student Strike In Blair Fight

Children Made Ill by Fumes From Old Hot-Air Furnace.

Ultimatum Given To Commissioners

Walkout Voted for Monday if Demand Is Ignored.

Enraged at the failure of District authorities to replace a 50-year-old hot-air furnace in the Blair school, Seventh and I streets northeast, approximately 125 mothers yesterday voted to lead their children on a strike Monday unless the Commissioners promise to install a steam heating plant during the Christmas holidays.

Called together by Mrs. Edwin Green, president of the Blair-Hayes Parent-Teacher Association, the women adopted a resolution in the Blair kindergarten room after listening to a dozen speeches for and against a pupil strike.

Only one dissenting vote was cast when Mrs. Green asked for action on the resolution, and the woman who opposed the strike had submitted a counter resolution asking the school be closed unless immediate steps were taken to provide more heat.

The mothers, by their votes, pledged themselves to accompany their children to school Monday morning. If, after a reasonable wait, they are not assured by the Commissioners their demands will be met, they will take their children back home.

To Keep Children Home.

"And we'll keep them until something is done," Mrs. Green said.

An impassioned plea against striking from a white-haired former labor leader and a stern warning from Mrs. Florence H. Rogers, school principal, failed to dissuade the indignant mothers.

Frequent outbursts against the Commissioners characterized the meeting, and jeers greeted references to a delegation's call at the District Building Thursday, when no one of the Commissioners could be found.

As Commissioners George E. Allen and Melvin C. Hazen are out of the city over the week-end, no action is expected in response to the ultimatum before Monday morning.

Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, early yesterday ordered the health department to make an investigation of fumes and gases in the Blair school and stated that if the health of the children were found to be endangered the eating plant would be replaced as an emergency measure.

Reports' Contents Withheld.

The report was submitted in Sultan's absence late yesterday, but the investigators declined to reveal its contents.

The Commissioners already have promised the antiquated Blair heating plant will be replaced next summer after funds are obtained in the 1936 appropriations act.

But the mothers stated clearly yesterday they would not be satisfied with such a promise, that they have waited too long already and they were made a similar promise last year but it failed to materialize.

The women, packed into the kin-

Boston's 'Curb' Is Closed Down

Ceases Operations "For All Time" Following Investigation.

Boston, Nov. 16 (AP).—United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford announced tonight the Boston Curb Exchange voted today to close and cease operations "for all time."

Ford said the exchange had voted to consent to an order subjecting it to heavy fines and its officers to imprisonment if it, in the future, operated to any extent whatever.

The exchange had been under investigation in the past fortnight by the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission.

John L. Flynn, attorney for the commission, said operation of the exchange after the commission's order would subject officers to penalties totaling $500,000.

The Federal investigation resulted after a hearing on the exchange's application for continued exemption from registration as a national securities exchange had disclosed facts about stocks listed on its board.

$1,014,678 Now in Hand; Special Gifts Unit Leads for Day.

Marking a spurt so phenomenal that solicitors had to be warned against complacence and overconfidence, $1,014,678.25 in contributions to the Community Chest was reported yesterday.

The fifth day's total was $255,620.17, almost half of which was raised by the Special Gifts Unit headed by Charles Carroll Morgan. This unit's $115,864.18 was described by H. L. Rust, jr., campaign chairman, as the largest amount ever raised in a single day by any unit in any drive.

It was the first time since the 1934 campaign opened that the Governmental Unit, of which Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman is chairman, had missed top ranking. His group was reported second in the fifth day totals with $82,269.57.

The Governmental Unit, however, remains first in the quota stand-

3 Kidnapers Taken Trying To Seize Boy

Would-Be Abductors Arrested When They Invade Home.

Telephone Threats Warn Family; Officer Hurt Accidentally.

Darien, Conn., Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Three would-be kidnapers were jailed tonight after invading the mansion of Gustave W. Westheim, wealthy New York travel agency owner, in an attempt to kidnap his 12-year-old stepson, Robert Lewis.

Police captured the men and a fourth escaped after two officers were wounded by the accidental discharge of a State policeman's shotgun in the Westheim home.

Police laid a trap three days ago when an anonymous telephone caller warned Mrs. Westheim, proprietor of the Lewis gown shop in New York, that harm would befall Robert, her son by a previous marriage, unless money was paid.

Second Call Yesterday.

Mrs. Westheim received a second call today.

"Who's in the house?" a voice asked.

Prompted by police, she replied, "Just Robert and myself."

Police concealed themselves in closets and behind doors while the family and servants withdrew to the second floor.

Fifteen minutes later an automobile appeared, circled the block three times, then halted at the house. One man entered the unlocked front door while the others sat in the car.

The maid, Mrs. Veronica Petersen, went downstairs, unaware the man was there. The intruder seized her and called the others in. As they entered, one of the men saw a policeman and they turned to escape.

State Policeman William Visokay and Amos Anderson, Darien detective lieutenant, fire sawed-off shotguns over the men's heads. Visokay, using his weapon as a club, shattered the stock on the head of one of the men. This caused the gun to discharge, wounding Anderson and Police Chief Edward A. Tinker.

Visokay's victim was knocked unconscious and the two others surrendered after a brief fight. The fourth—believed to be a discharged employe of Westheim—escaped into nearby woods.

Attempted Kidnaping Charged.

Those arrested gave their names as John Collins, 38, and Joseph Borg, 26, both of Providence, R. I., and Edgar La Rose, 38, Pawtucket, R. I. They were held for special arraignment tonight on charges of attempted kidnaping and robbery with violence.

Lieut. Anderson said "Borg" had admitted he was Victor Shannon, who was discharged as chauffeur for the Westheims several months ago. He quoted Shannon as saying he and his friends merely intended to ransack the mansion during the supposed absence of the owners.

Robert, a shy blonde boy, tall for his age, appeared outside the house late this afternoon, pushed his way past a throng of newspapermen, photographers and sound-reel technicians, mounted his bicycle and pedaled away to escape the excitement. His only reply to a barrage of questions as he swung through the gates was:

"Aw shucks."

Husband Murders Sister Of Famed Floyd Collins

Moline, Ill., Nov. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Carney, 39, sister of Floyd Collins, who died in a Kentucky cave several years ago after a fallen rock had imprisoned him, was first stabbed and then shot and killed today by her husband, Arthur Carney, 36. Carney then turned the gun on himself and committed suicide.

The police said Carney was infatuated with another woman and had repeatedly asked his wife to divorce him. Four small children survive.

Japan Rejects Nominal Parity In Sea Power

Tokyo Submits Counter Proposal; King George Urges Accord.

London, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Fresh instructions from Tokyo tonight directed the Japanese delegation to the preliminary naval conversations to adhere stiffly to the demand for naval equality with Great Britain and the United States.

An official Japanese spokesman said:

"These instructions leave our attitude unchanged."

He explained the answer was tantamount to rejection of the British proposals for a "gentleman's agreement" among the three major sea powers not to build above a publicly stipulated total tonnage in the next five years. The Japanese formal reply will be delivered to the British delegation early next week.

The British and American delegations believe Tokyo's reply contains counter-proposals which will be revealed later.

Counter-Proposals Seen.

Hope for success of the naval conference was rekindled by King George who expressed earnest desire the naval powers reach an accord.

This unusual procedure occurred during the monarch's speech to a combined session of the House of Lords and the Commons, proroguing Parliament. The new session opens Tuesday.

The King said he hoped Great Britain, the United States and Japan would agree "in order that the world may be spared the evil of unrestricted competition in naval armaments so effectively averted in recent years by inter-

Special Session Adjourns; King Going Today to Jackson Game.

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 16 (AP).—The Legislature of Louisiana in special session wrote the 309th new law for 1934 on the statute books of the Huey P. Long dictatorship and at noon today adjourned its third epochal meeting of the year.

"It was a marvelous session," the Kingfish remarked as he turned from political steamrollering and steamed up a special football train to head for Jackson, Miss., for the Louisiana State-Mississippi football game tomorrow.

There he will meet Senator-elect Theodore Bilbo, of Mississippi, who said he would go to the Senate in January and "raise more hell than Huey Long," and Gov. Mike Conner, who threatened a Mississippi "rebellion" against the "Kingfish" realm next door if Huey didn't come to the game.

But before leaving the legislative corridors, Long was handed a commission as a trustee of LSU by Gov. O. K. Allen, who will administer "Kingfish justice" for his superior under the Louisiana dictatorship.

"You have helped me out with this legislature so well that I wish to present you with this as a token of my esteem," Allen said as he handed the commission to Long.

"Well, Oscar," Long replied, "if you'll give me a couple of those oil wells you have in east Texas you can take this back."

"There's lots of things in these bills they don't know about yet," the Kingfish said, as he vouched for the credit of the State of Louisiana under his two-year debt mora-

C. of C. Votes Firm Backing Of New Deal

Strawn Wins Action of Directors to Push Recovery.

Roosevelt Is Receptive to Business Ideas, Says Resolution.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

American business moved yesterday to join hands with the New Deal in hastening recovery.

The United States Chamber of Commerce board of directors cleared the way for closer cooperation with the Roosevelt Administration and mapped plans to encourage agreement by outstanding business and agricultural groups on a legislative program.

As a definite peace gesture, Silas H. Strawn, of Chicago, a former chamber president and friend of Herbert Hoover, won approval by the directors of a resolution calling for a united front on a program to "accelerate" business improvement.

"Since the last meeting of this board," the terse resolution pointed out, "there is evidence of a growing determination by business, industry and agriculture to cooperate in every possible manner to promote an improvement in recovery from our existing economic condition.

President Is Receptive.

"Utterances by the President encouraged the belief that he is fully conscious of this attitude and that he is receptive of suggestions for the promotion of the common welfare."

The directors authorized Henry I. Harriman, chamber president, to appoint committees to work with other organizations in formulating a legislative program. Cooperation probably will be asked of the National Association of Manufacturers, the NRA durable goods committee and large farm groups. Labor unions are not expected to be included.

It was an open secret at chamber headquarters that business men were alarmed over the possibility of a swing to the left by the approaching Congress and believed the best way to head off radical legislation would be to support the President.

A chamber spokesman said the congressional elections convinced industrialists President Roosevelt will remain in office six more years and they must work with him if they are to receive White House consideration. The chamber official said business men thought cooperation by private interests would be essential if the Government is to succeed in its recovery drive.

Will Oppose 30-Hour Week.

Indications were the joint committees would ask that NRA be retained on a modified basis and would oppose suggestions for a 30-hour week and any move toward inflation.

Earlier, the chamber directors conferred with James A. Moffett, Federal housing administrator, on means of spurring his campaign for investment of millions in new homes.

The directors approved a report of their Federal finance committee,

7 Burn to Death In Auto Collision

Accident Occurred Near Altoona, Pa.

Altoona, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP).—Highway patrolmen reported that seven persons were burned to death tonight in a collision of two cars six miles east of Altoona. None of the victims were identified and the lone survivor, a woman, was unable to talk. One of the cars was reported to have been from State College, Pa.

Reports of the number of dead varied but highway patrolmen insisted seven persons perished as the two machines collided and burst into flames. The woman was rushed to an Altoona hospital. Her condition was described as critical.

The accident occurred on the William Penn highway, between Altoona and Tyrone.

Convalescent Trade, Not Budget, to Get Care, Members Say.

Crowther Favors Long-Range Plan

Seeks Levy Program to Put Treasury in 'Black' by 1940.

By Robert C. Albright.

Need for new taxes will be subordinated to business recovery at the coming Congressional session, despite heavy budget demands, ranking members of the House Ways and Means Committee said yesterday.

Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, chairman of the committee, is prepared to ask that Congress tread lightly on business receipts in revising its revenue program.

Representative Frank Crowther, of New York, Republican member of the committee, echoed this view, but urged a five-year tax planning program, affording a gradual basis of balancing the budget at least by 1940.

Returning to Washington preliminary to resumption of tax studies by the Ways and Means group early next month, members generally were of the opinion that $425,000,000 in expiring nuisance and excise levies will have to be reenacted, or some substitute found to replace them.

Discussion of Revision.

But even with elections safely behind, and the campaign soft pedal removed from taxation, discussion of a broad upward revision to meet the climbing debt failed to develop.

Instead, there was a prevailing emphasis on a hoped-for business upswing and a disinclination to check it with additional excise millstones.

"If any new taxes must be imposed, they should be light ones, and ought not interfere in any way with industrial recovery now in the making," Chairman Doughton said.

"I still hope a real upward revision will not be needed, either this session or in the years immediately to follow.

"As business recovers, it will pay returns in increased Federal revenues. I understand collections already are up from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 a month. On top of this, we can look for an accounting from such organizations as the RFC and the HOLC, which should be in the Treasury's favor. The money we spent with such agencies will come back."

Crowther's Opinion.

Representative Crowther, Republican, member of the special tax sub-committee resuming its studies here December 3, served notice he will demand clear cut recommendations on tax needs and revenues from the Treasury Department, once the committee gets under way.

"We ought to have that as a foundation on which to begin," he said. "We asked for it last session, and it wasn't given. In past Administrations it had always been the practice to submit such a Treasury guide to aid the committee."

Crowther will lay his plan for a five-year tax program, looking to eventual balancing of both the regular and emergency budgets, before the sub-committee.

"That is the only way we are going to get the budget balanced," he said. "The Administration has got to face it. Each year they put

Cave-In Kills Three in Mine

Three Others Narrowly Escape as Boulders Crush Roof.

Frostburg, Md., Nov. 16 (AP).—Tons of rock falling in the Bowery Furnace Mine at Midlothian today crushed three mine foremen to death and narrowly missed three laborers who had stepped aside to let the foremen inspect their work.

The dead men are:

Edward Jenkins, of Frostburg, brother of the operators of the mine. He is survived by his widow and three children.

John Whitman, of Lonaconing, survived by his widow and several small children.

William H. R. Thomas, of Frostburg, survived by his widow and one son.

The foremen had entered the mine to inspect the installation of a car track switch some distance from the entrance. When the three workmen, Henry Glime, James Jenkins, jr., nephew of one of the dead men, and Joseph Orten, stepped back, the roof gave way. None of the workmen was injured.

Authorities said the mine's walls and roof were supported and timbered in the usual manner.

'Zebbie' Goldsmith, Two Aids Convicted on Liquor Charge

Nearly seven hours of deliberation by a jury ended in a verdict of guilty in Police Court last night against "Zebbie" Goldsmith and three others, all charged with sale and possession of liquor at the Club Mayflower during the period between the passage of the District liquor law and the issuance of the first licenses.

Previous to their agreement the jurors had sent out word that they were unable to arrive at a verdict. At one time Charles Ford, attorney for Goldsmith, asked that the jury be discharged. Judge John P. McMahon ordered the deliberations continued.

The verdict came just before the dinner hour, and just when the case, which had previously been postponed 23 times for various reasons, seemed about to result in a hung jury. Judge McMahon had given instructions that he would return at 9:30 p. m. when the jury announced an agreement.

The long and bitterly contested case had an anticlimax a few days ago, when, because of a technicality, the charges were nolle prossed just before another jury was to receive the case. The defendants left the court jubilant, but were arrested on new evidence as they left the building.

The prosecution contended that Goldsmith and the other three, Robert W. Cozaine, Thomas J. Sullivan and William E. Nelson, violated the liquor law on February 17, 1934, at the club, which was located at 1223 Connecticut avenue northwest. Judge McMahon set Friday as the day for sentence, giving attorneys several days for preparing pleas for a new trial. Maximum sentence for the violation is a year in jail and a fine of $1,000. Bond of $1,000 each was asked for the four.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Plans to Fight Loss of Gloria to Mrs. Whitney

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Several months more of the bitter legal warfare between Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney over the custody of little Gloria Vanderbilt appeared inevitable tonight as Mrs. Vanderbilt's attorney announced he would appeal the forthcoming decision of Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew.

The decision will not be made public until Monday, but it is understood to give Mrs. Whitney almost complete custody of the little heiress. Gloria will spend only week-ends with her mother.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, who was said to be prostrated last night when she was told of the justice's dictum, was still "pretty bad" today, according to her brother, Harry Hays Morgan.

Morgan indicated, though, that she had not lost hope, since Justice Carew has not yet signed an order of custody. He said she would not talk at all about her hopes of ultimate victory on an appeal.

Meanwhile lawyers for the Whitney side—Herbert C. Smyth and his associates, and George W. Wickersham and Thomas B. Gilchrist, guardians of young Gloria's $2,800,000 fortune, were drawing up an order of custody which they will present to Justice Carew for his signature Monday.

The justice is understood to have asked lawyers for both sides to draw this order together, but Nathan Burkan, Mrs. Vanderbilt's attorney, said he would draw up an order of his own, and if Justice Carew declines to sign it, he would bring an immediate appeal.

The lawyers refused to be specific in stating his opposition to the ar-

Delano Board's Report Assails NRA and AAA

Temporary Plannnig Unit Calls for Creation of 'General Staff.'

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Sharp criticism of the NRA and the AAA was contained in the appendix of a report recommending establishment of a permanent national planning board to formulate national policies adapted to the technological economic and social changes in American life, made public yesterday by the White House without comment.

The report was submitted to the President last August by his temporary National Planning Board, which was headed by his uncle, Frederic A. Delano and included Prof. Wesley C. Mitchell and Charles E. Merriam. The only recommendation of the trio was creation of the new Government agency, which in their words would be "a general staff for our Government in peace as well as in war."

Five-Man Board Proposed.

The report proposed a five-man board, named by the Uresident with indeterminate tenure of office to be advised by a rotating panel of consultants and assisted by a large technical staff under a director and secretary. The board's function would be solely advisory to the President and Congress on means of utilizing "the national resources in men and material and social vision in the fusion of American interests, techniques and ideals into sounder and more satisfactory national policies."

Reviewing the progress of National planning in this country and elsewhere the board warned that "conditions have developed which great masses of people will not tolerate and should not be expected to tolerate over any considerable period of time" and that "not passive acceptance but violent explosion is the alternative if we fail to develop security and progress by rational and evolutionary methods."

"If our system cannot meet the challenge of general discontent and suffering it must give way to some other system more promising in its prospects of providing security and contentment," the board added in pointing the necessity for continued National planning.

"Supporting Data."

The criticism contained in the report of the NRA and the AAA was in an appendix prepared for the board by Dr. Lewis L. Lorwin, of the Brookings Institution and A. F. Hinrich, now in the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics but at the time professor of economics at Brown University. These two economists were commissioned to make a study of the NRA, AAA, the TVA and other Government agencies to determine their places in a National plan.

Although the board asserted it assumed "no responsibility for the views and opinions of the authors," it described their report as "supporting data" for the main body of the report. At all events, the goard thought the Lorwin-Hinrich findings sufficiently important to include them as a part of the report submitted to the President with a request for its printing as a public document.

The two economists found that many NRA codes emerged with "features of monopolistic cartels"; that "the total wage structure of the country remains in the same chaotic condition as it had been before the NRA came into existence"; that despite recent changes in NRA "no real steps toward a planned price policy were taken"; that "as regards long-range objectives, it is difficult to find any semblance of planning in the NRA"; that the process of code making—"set up hastily on the assumption that a bad code was better than none at all"—was so directed "as to impede rather than advance the planful reconstruction of industry" and that "not over a fourth of the code authorities have been well enough organized to function effectively."

Original 'Alice' Dies in England

years in peace and quiet, peace interrupted two years ago when the world, wishing to commemorate the 100th birthday of the author of "Alice in Wonderland," brought her out of retirement.

Despite her age, she came to the United States, to be whirled from one function to another, marveling at elevators and tall buildings, made honorary doctor of letters by Columbia University, speak over the radio and return home thanking Americans for making her stay "so pleasant."

Forever associated with little girls because she furnished the prototype for the child, Dodgson, writing as "Lewis Carroll," sent chasing the white rabbit through the fantastic wonderland he created, Mrs. Hargreaves had no daughters of her own.

Two of her three sons lost their lives in the World War, the third, Capt. Caryl Hargreaves, of the Scots Guard, surviving. He accompanied her to the United States in 1932.

To Alice Pleasance Liddell, eldest of the sisters he called "The Cruel Three," Dodgson gave the manuscript of "Alice in Wonderland" and she sold it in 1928 to S. A. Rosenbach, Philadelphia and New York collector, for $77,000.

Alice, born May 4, 1852, was 10 years old when her father became dean of Christ College of Oxford University and she and her two sisters came to know the don, the Rev. Charles Lutwidge Dodgson.

They made him their playfellow, he took them boat riding on the Thames, they asked for stories—and the adventures of Alice resulted.

It was Alice Liddell, too, who insisted that the fantastic stories be written down. And so they were, to become a source of pleasure for children and adults of every generation since.

Between You and Me

Chastened Fletcher Keeps Mum as Party Bolters Become 'Mouthpieces.'

By Raymond Clapper

CHAIRMAN FLETCHER of the Republican national committee has lost his voice. The elections did it. Republicans who were in ill-repute at Republican national headquarters because they were able to see some good in the New Deal now find their views respectfully sought.

National headquarters is thoroughly chastened and will discontinue its broadsides against the New Deal, it is understood. The program now is to let nature take its course and permit Republicans in Congress to let the party's policy evolve during the session this winter and next.

The Fletcher organization, aided by the joint senatorial-congressional committee of Senator Hastings and Representative Bolton, bucked the New Deal 100 per cent. Because of that, Senator McNary, Republican Senate leader, refused to participate in the party campaign. Senator Vandenberg told the party organization not to send any of its bitter-end speakers into his Michigan campaign.

Both were in disgrace before election. They are on top of the heap now. The Old Guard suffered humiliating defeat. It knows it is licked. Ogden Mills is now out for unemployment insurance. The Barr Building party headquarters will read the Congressional Record next winter to find out what the party leaders are thinking instead of telling them what to think.

No drive is on, however, to oust Chairman Fletcher. Everybody would rather sit tight and not force an open fight now. Revisionists who believe the party must liberalize itself, think that if nature is allowed to take its course for the next 18 months, Republicans will blossom out in its new and slightly more pinkish colors with comparatively few birth pangs.

Postmaster General Farley's troubles are just beginning. Prominent Republicans have listed him for slaughter. They are ready to go along with many aspects of the New Deal, but on condition that Farley go out, or quit his two political jobs as chairman of the National and New York State Democratic committees.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, is sharpening the headsman's ax. When he swings it in January, it will be to propose that the Postoffice Department be taken out of politics from top to bottom and be put on a 100 per cent career or civil service basis.

He already has challenged Farley's bid for Democratic campaign contributions on the ground that it is unlawful for a Federal employe to solicit political contributions. The Michigan Democratic national committeeman got into trouble over solicitation of funds because he was internal revenue collector, and he resigned. Refunds had to be made because the money was collected in violation of the law. Vandenburg thinks the cases are parallel.

Anyway, Farley is the new target.

The Administration is eyeing the American Liberty League warily. If the time comes when the New Deal starts cracking down on the league, the job will be largely in the hands of Charles Michelson, Democratic national committee publicity director.

His assignment would be to turn the heat on his former chief, for when Jouett Shouse became executive director of the Democratic national committee several years ago, he engaged Michelson as publicity director. Together they conducted what Republicans denounced as the "smear Hoover" campaign.

After Roosevelt was nominated, Michelson remained on but Shouse, who had fought Roosevelt, departed and is now head of the American Liberty League which, despite its disclaimers, is widely suspected of being anti-Administration.

Michelson was asked yesterday whether, in view of the present snug berthing of the Democratic Party, he could not drop his publicity work for the next two years.

"That," replied Michelson, "depends on whether Shouse will let me."

With revenue as hard as it is to get, Treasury officials overlooked an opportunity. Herbert Gaston, assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, just thought of it yesterday while gazing at the Washington Monument, encased in a box of steel scaffolding. "We could," he said, "have made a neat bit of revenue by selling billboard rights on the Monument."

The managing editor of Prof. Moley's magazine was very busy yesterday explaining to PWA headquarters that the article of Secretary Ickes in the current issue was not censored.

As the article appeared in print, all reference was omitted to the four-lane transcontinental highway which had been described by Ickes as a worthy PWA project.

Highway engineers ridicule the idea. They say four-way roads are justifiable only in thickly populated areas, not out over the bulk of the country where you can drive for hours without passing another car. They say it would be extremely costly to obtain a new arrow-straight right-of-way 3,000 miles long; that innumerable cities and villages would fight being by-passed with such a highway.

None of these reasons impelled Prof. Moley's magazine to leave out all references to the superroad. Ickes had sent that part of his manuscript in as an afterthought. Printers bungled the insert and failed to get it into the page forms. Or maybe they were trying to be helpful.

Dr. Rex Tugwell doesn't think he was sent to Europe to be put out of the way while the election campaign was going on. If the Administration was going to send anybody away, he asks, why not those 13,000,000 Republicans?

Tugwell, Back at Farm Post, Hints at Ride in 'Back Seat'

(Associated Press.)

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell returned yesterday from his European wanderings to take up again his old job as Undersecretary of Agriculture, but in a fashion which may spare him some of the verbal brickbats that have struck him in the past.

There were distinct and authoritative indications that Tugwell, at least in one sense, will do part of his driving from the greater comfort of the back seat in the immediate future.

About the first thing he did yesterday, however, was to hold a press conference. Tugwell's associates said so many reporters had requested appointments with the dapper official that it had been decided to call the newsmen in a body and get it over with.

"Tugwell Bill."

Mindful of the hubbub in the past and recent reports that the youthful undersecretary had slid way down the "brain truster" list, reporters asked him whether he intended to "push the Tugwell bill" at the next session of Congress.

The measure referred to proposed additional regulation of pure food and drug distribution, including advertising, and it never got out of committee at the last session.

"Do you mean the Copeland bill?" parried the debonair Tugwell, stepping quickly into a role which may cut down on his publicity, but will save him a good many lambastings from within the more conservative ranks.

"Will you support either the Tugwell or Copeland bill?" persisted the questioner.

"I'll support any bill agreed upon by Administration leaders," smiled Tugwell.

Other Questions.

The two questions about the food and drug bill were the most pointed asked the former Columbia professor during a conference which lasted almost an hour. For the most part reporters asked such queries as "Do you believe the time is ripe for an expansion of American foreign trade?" and "What did you find abroad?"

There was a reference to the fact that an address by Tugwell before the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome was interpreted as advocating "reform" before "recovery." Thereupon Tugwell said his interpretation of reform as used in the address, was "a practical way to go on from where we are now."

The former Columbia professor has been called the "best dressed New Dealer," and he was immaculate yesterday in a double-breasted dark gray suit, a delicately striped blue shirt, a dark red tie, tan shoes and blue socks with faint white rings. But one of the more critical feminine journalists contended afterward there was a wrinkle in one of the socks and that his pocket kerchief did not match his tie.

Tugwell is scheduled to make a trip to Warm Springs, Ga., soon to confer with the President and this was pointed out in refutation of rumors that the professor is in disfavor at the White House.

First Corn!

Roosevelt's Sly Remark Amuses Kentuckians.

Harrodsburg, Ky., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Kentucky, the State of beautiful women, fast horses and good whisky, appreciated one sly remark in President Roosevelt's speech here today.

Listing the number of "historical first things" for which Harrodsburg is noted, Mr. Roosevelt paused meaningly when he came to these words: "The first corn raised in Kentucky."

The crowd tittered. The President laughed back.

Prince's Wedding Will Be Guarded By Scotland Yard

London, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Scotland Yard is taking no chances that a crank might try to break up the wedding of the Duke of Kent, youngest son of the king, and Princess Marina, of Greece, November 29.

"The Yard" tonight assigned detectives to visit every shop-keeper and householder on or near the route the wedding procession will follow, asking them to whom rooms have been rented and how long the tenants have been there.

No trouble is expected, but in view of terrorism on the continent climaxed by the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseilles, extraordinary precautions are being taken.

King George has named Lady Mary Hope, a sister of the Earl of Rosebery, as lady-in-waiting to Princess Marina.

The royal wedding has inspired numerous other young British couples, and a marriage boom has resulted. Scores are planning to marry on the same day and registrations are especially heavy for the week of the wedding.

which conceded there was little hope of balancing the budget during the next fiscal year, but urged efforts to prevent an increase in the public debt.

"A satisfactory budget condition," the committee reported, "must be recognized as a prerequisite for absolute confidence in the currency position." • • •

Would Solve Debt Problem.

"If, by action of the Administration and the Congress, there is no increase in the debt in the next fiscal year, or only a moderate amount during a short period of transition to a balanced budget, the problem of the short-dated and floating debt can be solved, inflationary conditions controlled, and firm confidence sustained.

"If, however, there be placed no definite and dependable limitations upon the rise in debt and difficulties ensue, it will not matter what justification may be afforded, real or supposed, for the forms of expenditure that required the rise. • • •

"Assuming a deficit is inescapable, it would appear that if its amount were limited to a portion of the expenditures occasioned by direct relief grants, it would not create the uneasiness that would result from new large appropriations for public works and for other emergency activities that do not provide repayments or even from the inauguration of new lending enterprises."

Relief Reforms Needed.

The committee contended there was "much room for improvement" in Federal relief policies and administration.

"In urging that definite plans be made to keep any deficit next year to an irreducible minimum," the committee added, "we oppose any policy of Government spending for spending's sake.

"There should be a rejection by business of the idea that the Government should continue on the present level, or even lower level of expenditures, in order to increase purchasing power or to create business. Such a policy fosters as much unemployment as it relieves. • • •

"If a tolerable deficit of limited amount or an absolute balancing of the budget is impossible through a restriction of expenditures, some form of taxes that will in fact add to revenues without real impediment to recovery might well be sought out. We doubt if they can be found."

Gloria's Mother Will Seek Appeal

rangement supposedly outlined by Justice Carew, but a spokesman for the Vanderbilt family was much more outspoken.

"We have no intention of putting up with any such decision," he declared.

"The fact that the judge will permit the child to stay with her mother every week-end indicates that he did not find Mrs. Vanderbilt unfit, as Mrs. Whitney charged. And if he did not find her unfit, he was obligated to decide in her favor."

This spokesman said the decision would "unsettle the child emotionally more than ever" and would result in "hostility, antagonism, hate, and the poisoning of the child's mind against her mother."

Allowance to Continue.

It is understood that an arrangement whereby $48,000 a year from little Gloria's fortune is allowed Mrs. Vanderbilt by the courts for the use of herself and Gloria will be continued.

Though Mrs. Vanderbilt and her sisters and brother are reported to be bitter about the testimony of two discharged servants, it was learned that Justice Carew did not base his decision on Mrs. Vanderbilt's moral character, but on the life she led with her mother.

Rum Tax Evader Gets 4-Year Term

Judge Is Severe Because of Previous Record.

Baltimore, Nov. 16 (Spl.).—The most severe penalty for violation of the Federal internal revenue laws since the repeal of prohibition was imposed today upon Charles E. Ralston, of Cumberland, by Judge C. Coleman in Federal court.

Ralston, known as the "Al Capone of Cumberland," was given four years in the United States prison at Lewisburg, Pa. He pleaded guilty to two indictments charging sale and possession of liquor on which Federal taxes had not been paid.

Judge Coleman was told by G. Randolph Aiken, assistant United States district attorney, that Ralston had served several terms in prison on dry law violation charges under the Volstead act. Judge Coleman remarked that it was apparent the previous sentences had evidently taught Ralston nothing.

HOLC Will Extend Added Repair Loans

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—Applications for repair, remodeling or modernization of homes which already have received loans from the Home Owners Loan Corporation will continue to be considered, John J. Wicker, jr., Cirginia manager of the HOLC, said today after receiving instructions from Washington.

Mr. Wicker said the stoppage order recently issued applies only to new loans. Where the organization already is interested in property the only question will be whether the additional work suggested is suitable and whether the owner is able to meet the cost.

Valley Project 'War for Good,' Says President

of this monumental pile of concrete and steel now arising in the upper reaches of the Tennessee Valley, Mr. Roosevelt surveyed the scene with obvious satisfaction and declared:

"It's great stuff."

Then, in the valley behind the dam, he paused for a moment to tell a throng of several hundred workers:

"Some day you will be known as veterans, as veterans of a new kind of war—a kind of war that is going to improve conditions for millions of our American people."

That there will be no wavering from the course which already has led to the beginning of gigantic power plants on the Columbia and Colorado Rivers in the West, and to the projected development of the St. Lawrence in the Northeast, was evidenced by Mr. Roosevelt at every turn.

Pays Tribute to Pioneers.

Leaving his train at Harrodsburg, Ky., the President this morning assured a crowd of almost 40,000 that the "pioneers of 1934" must hew new paths for the future as did the followers of George Rogers Clark 150 years ago. Now, as then, he told them, "mere survival calls for new pioneering on our part."

Mr. Roosevelt was addressing the immense audience gathered on the sloping hillside below Fort Harrods, first settlement this side of the Alleghanies. Behind him as he spoke from a raised platform lay the reproduction of the wooden stockade and palisades that protected the settlers from the Indians.

"To most of the pioneers," declared the President, "the necessities of the new life called for efforts and experiments to which they had not been accustomed in their earlier years in the more ordered civilization of the Atlantic seaboard."

Parallel of Old and New.

Continuing the parallel of the old and the new, which Mr. Roosevelt frequently uses in his speeches to explain and justify the New Deal, he asserted:

"We, too, in these later years throughout the length and breadth of our land have come to a realization of the pregnant fact that the accustomed order of our formerly established lives does not suffice to meet the perils and the problems which we are compelled to face."

The President's address was part of exercises dedicating a $100,000 Federal monument and a State cenotaph to the Kentucky pioneers. He was presented by Senator Alban W. Barkley, whose colleague, Senator M. M. Logan, and Gov. Ruby Laffoon also spoke.

Motors to Norris Dam.

Arriving at Coal Creek, in Tennessee, during the early afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt motored to Norris Dam. Only a third completed, it is designed to back up 80 square miles of waters from the Clinch River as a storage reservoir to feed other even more elaborate power projects 400 miles downstream. Its total cost, when finished in 1936 and equipped with two 66,000-horse power generators, is estimated at $35,000,000.

An intimation of the magnitude of administration plans now before the President came from Secretary of Interior Ickes, who is accompanying Mr. Roosevelt.

Could Use Vast Sums.

In reply to questions, the Public Works administrator declared he "could use" up to five or six billion dollars in a year. He was careful to add, however, that he has not asked this amount.

On the other hand, Mr. Ickes said that use of such a large sum would give employment to all those now on relief who are able to take jobs. He placed at $1,200 the amount which would be required by this plan to keep one man at work a year. This is considerably more than the relief administration expends, but the fact that the Administration is moving steadily toward work relief, as opposed to direct relief, already has been affirmed by the President.

Foremost among Mr. Ickes plans in this direction is the elimination of grade crossings, a form of public works he regards as particularly favorable for speedy employment. He said he also favors Federal aid for rural electrification, conditioned on the requirement that power companies charge "reasonable rates." The charges of the TVA, which range from 25 to 50 per cent below the average, are considered a "yardstick," he said.

Leading New Deal Experiment.

The Norris Dam development, which includes the neighboring town of Norris, is perhaps the most clean-cut New Deal experiment in the whole Tennessee Valley "laboratory." Located 30 miles North of Knoxville, it is controlled entirely by the directors of the TVA, with no outside influences. Even the 800-mile shore line to be created by the dam is owned by the authority, which prevents private exploitation.

About 2,200 men are now at work on the dam, which will be 1,800 feet long, 210 feet thick at the base, and 253 feet high. Some 1,000 others, mostly CCC recruits, are engaged in clearing the reservoir area. Wages are high, for this section of the country, and hours are short. Common labor is paid 45 cents an hour for a 5½-hour day. Most of the workers live at Norris, which was created complete as a permanent community.

Text of Roosevelt Speech

(Associated Press.)

The text of President Roosevelt's speech at Harrodsburg, Ky., yesterday follows:

Gov. Laffoon, my friends of Kentucky:

We pioneers of 1934 are come together today to honor the pioneers of a century and a half ago. On my journey hither I have been reading once more of those thrilling days which saw the first peopling of these fair lands beynd the mountains and seized the perfect moment which destiny offered to our forebears to create these United States.

It has seemed to me in reading history that Harrodsburg can lay claim to having been the scene of more historical first things than any other spot I have ever known. It seems not enough that this delightful and historic place was the first permanent settlement well beyond the mountains, that here were the earliest pioneer homes, that here came the first school teacher and the first doctor, that here was the first court in the West. To this you must add many other firsts—the first corn raised in Kentucky, the first peach stones and apple seeds planted the first wheat field, the first grist mill and, perhaps most important of all, the first spinning wheel.

Tribute to Pioneers Who Founded Homes

That is why I am happy that in addition to paying tribute to the memory of George Rogers Clark, who led his men from here to his great invasion and preservation of the inland empire to the United State, you are also honoring the men and women who made his expedition possible and who followed him with the permanency of home building.

It has come to be a generally accepted rule of civilized nations that mere discovery of new lands conveys no sovereignty, and, indeed, that mere conquest conveys but little better title. It is, after all, only the peopling of the wilderness which gives permanency in the form of an ordered society.

There is a very definite analogy between those days and ours. Upon the pioneers of these great stretches of the central West were forced new activities because of the circumstances of their surroundings. They were compelled to hew out a new path, a path that was dependent not on the axe and the rifle alone, but upon their ability to govern themselves in new ways as well.

To most of the pioneers the necessities of the new life called for efforts and experiments to which they had not been accustomed in their earlier years in the more ordered civilization of the Atlantic Seaboard. Survival itself demanded immediate and new action.

Sees Pioneers of Today Overcoming Obstacles

I have called us who are here today "Pioneers of 1934." I mean everything that the word "pioneer" implies. We, too, in these latter years throughout the length and breadth of our land have come to a realization of the pregnant fact that the accustomed order of our formerly established lives does not suffice to meet the perils and problems which we are compelled to face. Again, mere survival calls for new pioneering on our part.

Some portion of the blood of the Colonists and the blood of the pioneers who worked their way through the generations, across the mountains and across the plains and again across the mountains until they came to the Pacific, that blood is present in very large part in the veins of millions of our people. More than that, the example and the spirit of these earlier Americans is present in the mind and the heart of all our population.

The events which we here celebrate were so vital in the extension of the new Nation that it has been thought proper for Congress to commemorate them not only in the spirit of gratitude, but in the spirit of emulation as an example to guide us in the conquest of new frontiers of the spirit that are neither physical nor geographical.

We are carrying on, we shall carry on, the purposes of these men and women of Harrodsburg. They were hewing out a commonwealth—and I like that word "commonwealth."

We, too, are hewing out a commonwealth—a commonwealth of the States which we hope will give to its people more truly than any that has gone before, the fulfillment of security, of freedom, of opportunity and of happiness which America asks and is entitled to receive.

London, Nov. 16 (U.P.). — Charles Sargeant Jagger, 49, sculptor, was found dead in his residence today. He had been in bed with a cold for two days and apparently died in his sleep.

Jagger had nearly completed a 60-foot statute of King George, to be set up in New Delhi, Indian. He considered it his finest work.

125 Mothers Vote to Keep Pupils Home

Fight Over 50-Year-Old Blair Furnace Brings Ultimatum.

dergarten room, opened their meeting with the Lord's prayer and a salute to the American flag. Then they gave vent to their protests.

Air in Room Foul.

The room was foul with stale air, mixed with the coal fumes which they said gave their children daily headaches, frequent colds and similar ailments, as they talked.

"We don't like the idea of striking any more than anyone else," Mrs. Green said, "but it's the only way we can get prompt action and keep the District officials from continually passing the buck."

A. D. Calvert, vice president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Associations, pleaded with mothers to adopt other means of attaining their purpose, and he assured them the new furnace would be installed next summer.

A labor leader for 40 years, 20 of which were spent in actively directing strikes, Calvert talked at length on the futility of strikes and the danger of interfering with the children's schooling.

Keep Children off Streets.

"You can get more by kindness and persuasion than by striking," he said. "And if you take your children out of school they will get into mischief or perhaps be run over by automobiles."

Calvert said he had been working steadily for four years to get a new heating plant for the Blair School.

Mrs. Emily Birch, who made a speech calling for "red-blooded women" to support the strike, recalled there had been trouble with the heating system when she was a pupil in the same school between 1902 and 1908.

"Don't be a slacker when the health of your child is at stake," shouted Mrs. Maude Meyer.

"I'll advise you the same way I do my children," said Rogers, the principal. "Count ten, a hundred or a thousand before you strike.

"Power of Suggestion."

"I am sorry that some of your children have been sick, but you must remember the power of suggestion is strong on children. I hope that you will not talk about this matter before your children."

A half dozen women arose to report their children had been complaining of repeated headaches, colds, sore throats, and other disorders, and one woman recalled there had been two cases of bronchial tuberculosis among the pupils.

"This is just as serious as an epidemic of diphtheria," one mother observed, "and you certainly would keep your children home from that."

Children in Dirty Rooms.

Several mothers commented they had reproved their children for coming home dirty every afternoon until they learned it was from coal dust that filled the air of the school.

Mrs. Richard Franklin opened the meeting by reading all of the correspondence which has passed between school and District officials and the Parent-Teachers Association and the Northeast Citizens Association.

In her resolution she suggested a part of the $30,000 received by the Commissioners from the sale of the Tenley school be used to install a new furnace at the Blair school, but Mrs. Green recalled that District officials had said that the money can not be spent unless appropriated by Congress.

"We Have No Money."

Declaring children frequently had to be sent into the halls with their coats on or even home because of the lack of heat, Mrs. Meyer observed: "It's always the same story —'We have no money.'"

Col. Sultan yesterday morning, in defending his refusal to spend current funds for a new Blair heating plant, admitted the replacement is badly needed, but he pointed out there are 26 schools with hot air furnaces that also should be replaced with steam heating plants.

The Blair school was built in 1884, and the same furnace has served throughout the 50 years. The school, though of brick exterior, is of flimsy construction, and the interior is begrimed with age and coal dust.

Like most buildings built a half century ago, the school has no ventilation system that permits fresh air without freezing the children near the windows.

Condemned Since 1929.

Mrs. Green quoted one of the Health Department inspectors as commenting when he entered the school and was met with a cloud of coal fumes and smoke, "Well, I would never send one of my children here."

The heating plant was condemned by the Health Department in 1929, and the condemnation has been repeated each year since. Several years ago a new furnace was actually delivered at the school, only to be moved to another school that District officials said needed it more.

'Buy French' Urged By Manufacturers

American Interests Deny They Are Alarmed.

Paris, Nov. 16 (AP).—A "buy French" campaign to induce the French people to buy domestic rather than foreign-made products was launched today by a large group of manufacturers.

Part of their program is the compilation of a directory of strictly French products, primarily for the use of the ministry of public works in its 10,000,000,000-franc ($658,000,000) six-year construction program to reduce unemployment.

It will also be distributed to French consumers to discourage the use of foreign goods. American interests here said they were not alarmed believing the plan "too impracticable to succeed."

Blair School's Old Furnace Leads to Strike Threat

Under the leadership of Mrs. Edwin Green, president of the Blair-Hayes Parent-Teacher Association, approximately 125 mothers voted to strike Monday unless their ultimatum is met by the District Commissioners.

Churchill Asks Britain to Arm; Warns of Reich

Build Up Aerial Defense, He Urges, to Forestall War Threat.

London, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Winston Churchill, fiery British statesman and publicist, tonight warned the nation of the increasing threat of war in Europe and gave a sensational description of the war danger from Germany.

"Only a few hours away by air," Churchill said in a national broadcast, "there dwells a nation of nearly 70,000,000 highly educated, industrious, scientific and the most intensely disciplined people in the world, who are being taught from childhood to think of war as a glorious exercise and death in battle as the noblest fate of man.

"This is a nation which has abandoned all its liberties in order to augment the collective might of the country, which, for all its strength and virtues, is in the grip of ruthless men, preaching the gospel of intolerance and racial pride, unrestrained by law, Parliament or public opinion.

"In that country all pacifist speeches, all morbid war books are suppressed and the authors imprisoned. From their new commandments they have omitted 'Thou shalt not kill.'"

Churchill urged that it was now too late for further struggles toward general disarmament.

"Without another day's delay," he said, "we must begin to make ourselves at least the strongest air power in the European world, and thereby recover to a large extent the safety we formerly enjoyed through our navy. We can thus prevent ourselves from being blackmailed into surrendering our possessions or being forced unwillingly to join any European war."

He urged the League of Nations to summon the nations to act as special constables to insure peace and enable the world to survive this decade "without a horrible, fatal catastrophe * * * giving us a blessed breathing space in which to reconstruct the life of Europe and reunite our sundered, quaking civilization."

national engagements freely entered into by the parties concerned."

Cites Assassinations.

The King began by commenting on the murders of Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss of Austria, King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France in the current year.

He said these evidences of terrorist violence had "profoundly shocked" the world, and undoubtedly caused a serious setback to movements on foot for European peace.

"I have therefore noted with satisfaction," the King said, "the untiring efforts my government has made in many directions to counsel moderation and promote friendlier relations between nations."

The King was absent, his speech being read by the Lord Chancellor.

Paderewski Denies He Plans Tour of U. S.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Contrary to reports, Ignace Paderewski, the pianist, will not emerge from retirement for an American concert tour, he said today in a wireless message.

"Deeply regret I am not playing this season," said the message received by the New York Guild for the Jewish Blind. The guild had invited the famous musician to be guest artist at its forthcoming annaul concert. The message was sent from Paderewski's estate at Morges, on Lake Geneva.

R. H. Orrison Dies Here at 64

Fuel Company President Was Head of Housing Corporation in War.

Robert H. Orrison, founder and president of the Action Fuel Co., died yesterday of heart disease in National Homeopathic Hospital after a year's illness. He was 64 years old.

Formerly a railroad construction contractor, Mr. Orrison founded the company in 1926.

He was born in Leesburg, Va., and educated at St. John's Military Academy, in Alexandria. He was general auditor and later acting controller of the United States Housing Corporation during the World War, when he first came to Washington.

Mr. Orrison is survived by his widow, Mrs. Edith Orrison; five sons, Vernon, Robert, Lynwood and Allen, all of Washington, and Kelvin, of Philadelphia; four daughters, Jean and Doris, of Washington; Mrs. Robert Jordan, of Rye, N. Y., and Mrs. Oscar Layne, of Chattanooga, Tenn. He leaves two brothers, Foster and Roland, both of Alexandria, and a sister, Mrs. Bert Tatspaugh, of Rosemont, Va.

Funeral services will be held today at the home of Mrs. Tatspaugh. Burial will be in Leesburg.

40-Pound Turkey Awaits President At Warm Springs

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 16 (AP). President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving turkey—a 40-pounder and Georgia grown—has arrived.

The bird, a gobbler, was sent to the President's "other home" by 97-year-old Mrs. Eliza F. Manry, of Goggins, in Lamar County.

It was Mrs. Manry, who provided the Roosevelts with their Thanksgiving piece de resistence last year. The President personally served the bird to a number of young patients and others at a gaily bedecked table.

The turkey, of the mammoth bronze variety, "boarding" with Duncan Leverett, groundsman for the Warm Springs Foundation, of which the President is head, awaiting the pleasure of the chef.

A dozen patients are to be seated at the President's table this year when the turkey is carved.

They are selected by a drawing, originated by the patients themselves. There will be six boys and six girls, grouped by age.

Carter Defeats Suit for Libel

Smith's Action for $50,00 Dismissed by Justice O'Donoghue.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in the District Supreme Court yesterday, dismisstd a suit filed by Lewis H. Smith, linotype operator of the Government Printing Office, against former Public Printer George H. Carter. The suit sought $50,000 because of an alleged libel published by the public printer in preferring charges against Smith.

At the conclusion of Smith's attorney's opening address to the jury, Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly asked for a directed verdict on the ground that Carter, as the then public printer, was acting as a Government officer and could not be held liable for his official acts.

Justice O'Donoghue agreed with Fihelly and added the assertion that Smith could not recover under the circumstances even if the written charges were maliciously made.

Russia Orders Farmers to Get More Live Stock

Moscow, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Soviet's collective farms and farmers today were ordered to get more pigs, cows and sheep.

Resolutions promulgated by the council of people's commissars and the central committee of the Communist Party provided for large increases in live stock holdings.

A new step in the drive to give "every collective farmer a cow," the move will be financed by 25,000,000 roubles set aside from government funds, it was announced.

State farms were ordered to sell 430,000 head of cattle, 600,000 sheep and 250,000 pigs to collective stock farms before the end of the first quarter of next year.

Tashkent, U. S. S. R., Nov. 16 (AP). The Soviet, anxious to speed cotton production in Uzbekstan, today had more than 50 persons on trial at three places in the Uzbek Republic, on charges of delaying cotton output.

Special judges were sent to try the kulaks (rich peasants) and alleged saboteurs as the republic's failure to turn out more than 64 per cent of the cotton quota assigned it stirred Communist authorities at Moscow.

Insull's Losses 'Mostly Paper,' U. S. Declares

Stock Wiped Out Cost Him Only Few Cents, Says Accountant.

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP).—Aiming their final blows at Samuel Insull, prosecutors told the mail fraud jury today that Insull's losses, in the crash of the financial companies were "mostly paper."

This rebuttal testimony came from a Government accountant after the defense rested and the trial moved into its closing phase. The defense ended with Insull's attorney confident the utilities executive had answered the Government's charges that Insull and his aids bilked investors of $100,000,000.

Low Prices Cited.

What Insull lost, said Government Accountant Carl A. Herring, was stock which cost him only a few cents a share. He acquired his holdings in the Corporation Securities Co. at a cost of 13 cents a share for the common, said Herring, and 26 cents a share for the preferred.

It was this stock which Samuel Insull, jr., last witness for his father and their 15 business associates, had testified "went down with the ship."

Young Insull was excused from the stand after 80 minutes of cross-examination from Salter, which frequently broke the witness' cheerful manner. Forced to admit today that a large part of the huge amounts his father gave to charity was in stock, not cash, he was asked:

Defense Ends Case.

"Why didn't you give that fact yesterday?"

"I wasn't asked for it," said Insull.

A few questions by Insull's lawyer ended the defense case.

Presented in 13 court days, the Insull defense countered the mail fraud charges with "we lost, too." Admitting mistakes, as Insull did when he occupied the stand for more than two days, they insisted that they put their own money into the same stock they sold to small investors in the Middle West.

E. P. Simpson Left $180,000 to Family

Widow Files Will Giving Self, Children Estate.

Ellsworth T. Simpson, Georgetown real estate operator, who died last month, left an estate valued at $179,450, it was shown yesterday when his widow, Mrs. Mary C. Simpson, filed a petition for probate of his will in the District Supreme Court.

Seven pieces of Washington real estate, with an assessed valuation of $146,500, made up the main portion of the estate, there being $32,950 in personal property.

The will directed that Mrs. Simpson, a son, EllsworthL. Simpson; two daughters, Helen L. Simpson and Marjorie J. Simpson, together with a sister of the deceased, Ella Jane Tavenner, be gvien almost the entire estate. Three minor bequests to charities were the only others. Attorney W. Gywnn Gardiner filed the petition.

Blaze at Lakehurst Sweeps Gas Cell Shop

Lakehurst, N. J., Nov. 16 (AP).—The naval air station's gas cell storage shop was swept today by fire, causing several thousand dollars damage, according to estimates by Commander Charles E. Rosendahl.

The fire apparently was caused by electric wiring, naval officers stated. The building is near the hangar where the dirigible Los Angeles is being reconditioned for groundwork training purposes.

ings, having attained 76.77 per cent of its goal with the drive half over, and is far in the lead with its 60,610 contributors, whose cash gifts and pledges amount to $437,982.13.

Totals announced at yesterday's luncheon atop the Willard Hotel, which was addressed by Elwood Street, Director of Public Welfare, disclosed that 60.57 per cent of the campaign's $1,675,000 goal has been reached. This stage was not reached in the 1933 Chest drive until the eighth day.

Facing a record-breaking attendance of workers, Mr. Street, who resigned as Community Chest director to take his present position, recommended in his talk that solicitors be more thorough in having pledge cards filled out.

"Too many of the pledges are paid in full by people who could readily pay once each month for 12 months of the year the amounts which they now pay in cash for the whole year," he said. "If this campaign fails, it will be because we have not done sufficiently adequate, thorough and painstaking work on the individual prospects."

But no one was thinking of possible failure as round after round of applause greeted the encouraging reports of unit chairmen and area leaders. The spirit of the assembly was symbolized at the very beginning when Chairman Rust pounded his gavel so fiercely that the blow cracked the thick wooden block which received it.

Mellon Gives $5,000.

Andrew W. Mellon was informally revealed as a $5,000 contributor. Thursday night workers noticed lights burning in passing by his apartment at Eighteenth street and Massachusetts avenue. They tackled the former Secretary of the Treasury, who is a strong supporter of the Pittsburgh Community Chest, and were rewarded with the $5,000 gift.

Pleading against overconfidence, Director Herbert L. Willett, jr., pointed out that although 60.57 per cent has been attained in the first five days compared to 43 per cent in the same period last year, the 1933 campaign fell short of its goal by 20 per cent.

A total of 17,932 givers contributed the $255,620.17 reported yesterday. The special gifts unit, highest in amount pledged, was last with 129 givers, meaning that its contributions averaged almost $900 each. It has reached 68.6 per cent of its quota, with 267 contributors having given $343,973.68.

The metropolitan unit, led by Joseph D. Kaufman, announced 1,130 new pledges for a total of $20,272.71. In reaching 39.05 per cent of its quota, this branch has received 5,213 pledges and $100,412.89.

Walter B. Clarkson's group solicitation unit brought in 4,071 pledges yesterday totaling $37,213.71.

The Rev. Vernon Ridgely, pastor of Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, pronounced the invocation yesterday. Today's speaker will be Miss Katherine Lenroot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau. The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. Robert M. Skinner, pastor of Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

Roosevelt Aid Asked In Stopping Lynchings

Geneva, Nov. 16 (AP).—President Roosevelt's aid to stop lynchings in the United States was asked in a letter sent him today by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

The organization also announced it had telegraphed to Reichsfuehrer Hitler, of Germany, protesting against death sentences for Socialists and had petitioned the League of Nations Council to consider to what extent European tension was aggravated by irresponsible detention of political and other prisoners.

Capitol Hill Staff Finds Santa Claus Limping on Crutch

The Norris lame-duck amendment is distinctly lacking in anything resembling a Santa Claus beard so far as 2,200 employes on Capitol Hill are concerned, according to the Associated Press.

This change in the Constitution is taking away the pre-Christmas pay day that has been in vogue for years. Before the elimination of the so-called lame-duck session, it was customary for Congress to pass a resolution authorizing the payment of salaries to Capital employes on the twentieth of December. Now the December checks won't arrive until January 1, since Congress will not be in session prior to Christmas.

"We'll have to try to do something about that next year," said a group of employes yesterday.

Relief Mobilized For Storm Victims

Manila, Nov. 17 (Saturday) (AP). Relief workers were mobilized today to take food and medicine into the southeastern provinces devastated by a typhoon Wednesday and Thursday.

Twenty-three persons were known dead, with a score of persons reported missing and nine listed officially as missing, as reports came in early today over partially restored communications. Damage totaling millions of dolars indicated in meager reports.

Four towns appeared to have been hammered viciously by the intense storm. In Sorsogon Province there were 11 known dead, and 60 per cent of the town's dwellings blown down. Naga, Daet and Legaspi also were reported badly damaged.

Woman Sneezes Week, Puzzling Physicians

Battle Creek, Mich., Nov. 16 (AP). Physicians today were trying to solve a double mystery: What started Mrs. Pearl Wakefield, 26, to sneezing, and what stopped the affliction a week later.

For seven days she sneezed continuously, except when quieted by opiates. Then she stopped. Doctors were agreed on only one thing, that simple home remedies, proposed by the score, were ineffective.

Death Claims Wife of Banker In Washington

Mrs. Wm. C. Worthington Was Descendant of English Colonists.

Mrs. Margaret Page Dame Worthington, wife of William C. Worthington, died yesterday at her home, 1751 Park road, after a brief illness.

Mrs. Worthington was a daughter of the Rev. Nelson Page Dame and Mrs. Mary Walker Dame. Her father, formerly rector of Christ Church in Winchester, is now missioner of the Episcopal Church in Virginia and, with Mrs. Dame, lives in Richmond.

Mrs. Worthington, who was born in Blacksburg, Va., June 15, 1879, is a direct descendant of Gov. Thomas Nelson, who built and lived in the famous Nelson house at Yorktown. She also is descended from the original William Bird, of Westover, on the James River, and King Carter, of Corotoman, in Lancaster County, Va.

Her ancestors were among the first English colonists who settled on or near Jamestown Island, and who built permanent homes on the banks of the James River and, later, in the Valley of Virginia.

She was married December 27, 1905, to William Coleman Worthington, Washington banker and business man, and has lived continuously in this city nearly 30 years.

Mrs. Worthington was a member of the Colonial Dames of America and the Twentieth Century Club, and was a communicant in All Souls Memorial Church in this city, of which she had been a member since the first service in the original church.

She is survived by her father and mother, her husband, two daughters—Mary Coleman Worthington and Margaret Dame Worthington; a son, Nelson Page Worthington, and three sisters, Miss Mary C. Dane, of Richmond; Miss Lelia L. Dame, of New York City, and Mrs. William D. Smith, of Christchurch, Va.

Funeral services will be held at All Souls Church.

Vindication.

Biographers are working hard to vindicate some long dead gents, who have been ostracised and barred as being worth not twenty cents. Some people of the dim, dead past have lived in history as vile, their records left the world aghast, for ages they've been out of style. Who has not shuddered at the name of "Bloody Mary," British queen, who won a most unholy fame by burning martyrs on the green? She kept the Smithfield fires alight, she kept them burning nights and days, and now learned men sit down and write ecstatic volumes in her praise. She was a gentle, kindly dame, by false detractors badly stung; she had to shoulder all the blame for deeds that her advisers sprung. Who has not thought of Richard Third as murderer and thief and knave? But all such scandals were absurd, he was a good man, wise and brave. In him all virtues did abound, he was a monarch to admire, and if there was a church around, he would be singing in the choir. Tiberius, of ancient Rome, has left a foul and base renown; upon an isle he made his home, and there dragged every virtue down. His name has stood 2,000 years as symbol of all beastly things; and now a gifted scribe appears to show he was the best of kings. He has been slandered and maligned through all the ages dark and drear; he was so sweet and good and kind it would be hard to find his peer. And so the modern student paints his characters as white as snow; it seems the villains all were saints in those brave days of long ago.

Opposing Sides Begin Big Push On Chaco Front

12,000 Bolivians in Drive to Free Bases as Foes Try Counter Move.

Buenos Aires, Nov. 16 (AP).—Paraguay and Bolivian strategists, staking thousands of men on their battle of wits, tonight were jockeying for position in what promised to be the decisive engagement of this season's bloody Chaco campaign.

With the deluges of the rainy season overdue, 12,000 Bolivians smashed ahead in their drive to free their bases from the Paraguayan threat and drew within 12-miles of Picuiba, important Paraguayan fortress in the north central Chaco.

Turn on Bolivian Defenses.

Paraguayans, meanwhile, thrust at Bolivian defenses in the Canada El Carmen sector in an apparent effort to outflank and surround the line of Bolivian forts running northwest along the Pilcomayo River.

At stout Fort Ballivian, Guachalla, Dorbigny, and Chevaux, 12,000 Bolivian defenders awaited the rainy season, their communications endangered by Paraguay's newest counter-operation.

The Paraguayans, under Col. Fernandez, obviously were seeking to bring Bolivia's attention southward to the Pilcomayo area, thus relieving the pressure at Piuiba. Asuncion today reported capture of the small Fort Independencia west of Carmen, which fell yesterday.

Claim 5,000 Lives Lost.

Bolivia, however, heartened by her war ministry's announcement that action during the past few days cost Paraguay 5,000 men and forced her lines back 125 miles, continued her push toward Picuiba, claiming the Canada El Carmen attacks without importance.

Defending Picuiba were 12,000 under Col. Rafael Franco, one of the Asuncion government's leading strategists, while Lieut. Col. David Toro headed the equal number of Bolivian attackers.

torium act which he offered as the first step in cancellation of all private debts.

Public Debt to Be Paid.

Long said the debt moratorium act would not affect State, parish, municipal or Federal obligations.

"The State of Louisiana," his formal statement declared, "and the political subdivisions and municipalities thereof, as heretofore, will continue to meet their obligations. No other State nor the United States can excell our record in meeting payments on public obligations. Our State operates on a cash basis, has a balanced budget and plenty of reserve for contingencies, as any bank or commercial report will show."

The State bank commissioner becomes the moratorium commissioner and will rule on all applications for suspension of debts with his judgment exempt from court injunction during litigation of suits. Only debts contracted prior to passage of the act are involved.

The 44 bills of the extraordinary session flew through to final enactment today and were sent to the Governor for his signature. Allen remained away from the Mississippi game to review the bills and affix his official stamp.

Girl Marines Honor Mrs. Swanson

Girl Scout Mariners had tea aboard the schooner Constellation yesterday and entertained Mrs. Swanson, wife of Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson. Above, Joyce Geiger is presenting flowers to Mrs. Swanson and Elizabeth Smith, who gave Mrs. Swanson the Scout emblem, looks on.

Reynolds' Kin Offer 2 Babies 15-Million 'Cut'

Libby Holman's SonWould Get $6,000,000 Under Settlement Plan.

Holman Reynolds, $750,000 and the remainder be used for benevolent purposes.

Without offering an explanation for the unequal division between the two children, the proposal—filed with Forsyth Superior Court—suggested that $6,000,000 go to Christopher Smith Reynolds, their brother's posthumous son by Miss Holman, and $9,000,000 to Anne Cannon Reynolds, 2d, his child by his first wife.

The proposal was filed by R. J. Reynolds, jr., Mrs. Mary Reynolds Babcock and Mrs. Nancy Reynolds Bagley.

There was no provision in it for Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds-Smith, who obtained a Reno divorce from the tobacco heir in 1931, to receive any part of the fund.

In a predivorce agreement, Reynolds created a trust of $500,000 for her and a similar trust for their small daughter.

Whether the proposed distribution is agreeable to all parties concerned and is the reported "family agreement" rumored under negotiation for months was not made known.

Attorneys involved in the case indicated, however, the proposal would certainly be contested, if for no other purpose than to establish the validity of that distribution.

Distribution of the $25,000,000 would be made in 1939, the year when Smith Reynolds, under terms of his father's will, would have received the sum, had he lived.

Soft-Pedal Is Due On Tax-Rise Plan it off until the next, and now some of them tell us there is no need for balancing it at all."

Will Renew Fight.

Crowther will renew the fight he started last year to substitute a manufacturers sales tax for existing nuisance levies. His plan would yield $400,000,000 annually, approximately the amount of the taxes expiring within the next seven months.

Doughton, whose committee last session held hearings on the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill, carrying a 5 per cent pay roll tax, expressed doubt the unemployment insurance bill now proposed by the President will come before his committee. That group considers only measures involving tax problems.

He interpreted the President's recent statement on economic security to social service experts, as spelling the doom of the pay roll tax as a Federal levy. The Ways and Means Committee chairman, who opposed the pay roll tax last session, favors a system of contributions less burdensome to industry.

Fay Vallee Loses Move to Avoid Suit

Vallee's motion to overrule the Supreme Court which permitted Vallee to file a counter claim in the action, asking that their separation agreement be declared valid and that the estranged wife be permanently enjoined from bringing any suit against him in any State other than New York.

The higher tribunal also dismissed Mrs. Vallee's plea to strike out the orchestra leader's amended answer, in which the counter claim was introduced into the suit.

The practical effect of the two rulings was that Mrs. Valee's claims for more than $100 weekly maintenance, scheduled to start in Supreme Court Monday, must be finally settled in this State. If she loses, the court will be able to enjoin her permanently from starting or continuing suits elsewhere.

The Valees signed the separate maintenance agreement on April 5, 1933. Six months later she brought suit here to set aside the pact, claiming she had entered into it under duress and "fraudulent misrepresentations" to the orchestra leader's income.

Early in 1934, Mrs. Valee started a dvorce action in California, asking $7,450 monthly alimony, $10,000 expenses and $50,000 counsel fees. She was enjoined by the New York Supreme Court in March from continuing that suit until the action here was settled.

Wage Claims Start Receiver's Action

Cumberland Mill Owner Must File Answer.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Judge Albert A. Doub in the Circuit Court yesterday signed an order for Peter E. Berry to show cause before November 30 why a receiver should not be appointed to take charge of the property and assets of the Berry Throwing Mill here. This mill occupies the property once known as the Peerless Laundry. Berry converted it to a silk throwing factory 20 years ago.

This follows a petition by five employes who claim their wages are unpaid. They are Richard Sharrette, Richard Hamilton, Leslie Robertson, Delsa Robinette and Andrew Porter. They say amounts are due them for wages since furloughed in August, all under $50.

The petitioners charge the Berry mill is idle, insolvent and indebted to various persons and corporations, and allege Berry has mortgaged and pledged his assets and property. The claimants also say the factory property and equipment is being allowed to deteriorate.

Former Court Official Convicted in Shortage

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 16 (AP).—Forney W. Brandon, member of a widely known Alabama family, and former deputy clerk of the Jefferson County Circuit Court, today was convicted by a jury of converting public funds to his own use. Formal sentence was delayed.

During his trial, Brandon was attended by his brothers, W. W. Brandon, former Governor, and John Brandon, State auditor. Brandon was charged with a shortage of $18,466.46 in his accounts.

Auto Accessories Gain.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—On the basis of income statements for the first nine months of the year filed by 21 leading automobile accessories manufacturers, trade interests estimate a substantial gain in the industry's 1934 profits, as compared with the previous year.

Free Milk

Service Started at Schools in Martinsburg.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—The civic department of the Woman's Club yesterday started serving milk to undernourished children in the grade schools.

Milk delivered to schools Thursday amounted to 374 half-pint bottles, an increase of 68 over last year. When lunches were discontinued last spring the department was serving 306.

Based on this number being served, the department anticipates a monthly cost of $175.

Helfrich and Cassel Win Annapolis Exam

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Harry D. Helfrich and Charles M. Cassel, jr., both of Hagerstown, finished first and second, respectively, in the competitive examination for two appointments to the United States Naval Academy from the Sixth Congressional District, according to an announcement made today by Representative David J. Lewis.

Howard H. Fawcett, of Cumberland, and William C. Holyday, jr., of Boonsboro, finished third and fourth, respectively, and will be named first alternates. Donald Buckle and Harold J. Fleming, both of Cumberland, were fifth and sixth, respectively, and will be named second alternates. Robert F. Keadle, Mapleville, and Charles T. Menshaw, Cumberland, finished seventh and eighth.

News Briefs of Maryland

(Associated Press.)

Taneytown—James C. Myers and Charles Arnold were nominated for the presidency of the Taneytown Volunteer Fire Department at the organization's monthly meeting here. Election of the officers of the company will be held at the next meeting.

Cumberland—William Claus, general manager of the Cumberland & Pennsylvania Railroad, has advised State's Attorney William A. Huster that the railroad will install warning signals at the Braddock road crossing, near Alleghany Grove, where two youths were killed in an accident last week.

Westminster—All branches of Methodism will be represented at a meeting here December 2 in Alumni Hall at Western Maryland College. Bishop William F. McDowell, of Washington, will deliver the principal address.

Chestertown—Kent County Gun Club members are growing gloomier here day by day. With the ducking season already two weeks old, only a comparatively few fowls have been bagged. Last year, bag limits were reached almost every day. But until snow and stormy weather drive the birds South, sport will be scarce.

Frederick—Hunters and rabbits were reported in the woods in "equal numbers" in Frederick County at the close of the first day of the open season on upland game. Benjamen F. Phebus, county game warden, reported that, although ducks were scarce, quail and pheasant are plentiful.

The Church Indispensable

Despite Its Current Shortcomings, It Remains Today The Most Beneficent Institution on Earth.

By William T. Ellis.

Are we really grown up enough to face frankly this tremendous question of the present-day Christian Church—an issue that is thickly overlaid with platitude, timidity, custom and conventionality? It needs adult minds to confront the existing problem fairly and freely and fearlessly.

For the Church is the largest and most widely distributed organization on earth—larger than any nation or any race. Throughout Christendom, the Church is part of the basic fabric of our civilization. As we are witnessing today in Germany, the Church alone dares to face and withstand political dictatorship.

All of the thinking of the Western world is permeated by the ideas, and even the language, of the Church. To the Church has been intrusted the moral and spiritual guidance of the people, from the cradle to the deathbed. Any intelligent mind that lets itself brood upon the subject of the Church is likely to arrive at a sense of wonder and awe at the uniqueness, ubiquity and power of this institution.

Facing the Facts.

Yet all is not well with the Church today; and consequently something portentous and prodigious ails society. The Church was never before so rich as now; never boasted so many and so beautiful buildings, and never had so many names on her rolls.

Yet suddenly, the Church has sailed into heavy weather. Her riches are failing her. Her membership is less loyal.

What is the matter? Basically, I think, the reason is that too many members and officials have been more interested in the Church of Christ than in the Christ of the Church. Institutionalism has superseded followship and life. "Church work," in myriads of instances, consists largely in raising money for the mortgage.

Prideful building of ostentatious houses of worship has broken the back of many a congregation. Today, if they could make any use of the properties, the bankers would have taken over hundreds of church edifices. This postwar zest for the building of large churches—many of them architectural monstrosities—has in many cases been a worldly substitute for real spiritual life. After having been in many such, I confess to a growing appreciation of the simplicity of the Quaker meeting house. I attended service one morning in a famous and fashionable New York church, and the signs of perfect organization were everywhere, reminding one of the methods of the motion picture palaces. I felt that I had been witnessing a performance, instead of worshiping in a fellowship.

Of course it is a matter of known statistics that we have an oversupply of clergymen and of theological students. To many of these the sacred calling has become a "job," a means of livelihood. In an ecclesiastical gathering one day I heard a minister, who for years had been engaged solely in chicken-raising, get up and bitterly berate the organization because it had not found a job for him. Imagine Peter and Paul complaining to the Church Council at Jerusalem that it had not provided them with satisfactory pastorates!

What Is the Church For?

Our lesson gives us a glimpse of the early Church, as a brotherhood without buildings — there were no Christian Church edifices for at least two centuries—meeting in the Temple, and in the houses of the members. Later, as their numbers grew, the Christians met in the groves and fields; and, after persecution became fierce, in catacombs and other hidden places. Yet the Church was never more true to Christ's mind than in those early days.

After all, what is the real purpose of the Church? Is it not threefold—an assembly of the Christian brotherhood for worship, for fellowship and for instruction? If these three purposes are fulfilled, we have a church. If any one of them is lacking we have something less than a New Testament church.

Having looked rather critically into the case of the present-day Church it would be less than fair for me to fail to record my sincere belief that, despite her shortcomings, the Church is the most beneficent institution on earth today. Within her membership are to be found the best people, animated by the highest and holiest motives. Their unrequited service to their fellowmen is unmatched by anything else. They are "the salt of the earth," as Jesus bade them be; preserving and purifying all that is best in the life of the individual and of the community. Without the saving salt of the Church, society would soon perish of its own corruption.

Then there are the preachers, the much-criticized preachers. Anybody who knows them in large numbers, and does not judge the whole by the group of ambitious, publicity hungry ones often to be found in the big cities, must bear testimony to their godly lives, to their sacrificial labors, to their sincere Christian devotion and to their immeasurable influence upon the world. We could get along for a generation without our sociologists, our scientists and our politicians; but we simply could not dispense with the men of God; who shape childhood's ideals, fire youth's noblest impulses, hearten the discouraged, visit the sick, solemnize our marriages and bury our dead. They are not only true pillars of the Church, but also true pillars of civilization.

U. S. Requests Court Dismiss Land Title Suit

Action to Enjoin Ickes From Taking Tracts Held Groundless.

A plea for dismissal of a suit filed in the District Supreme Court to enjoin Secretary of the Interior Ickes from accepting title to two large tracts of land that are included in the Shenandoah National Park system was placed in the record yesterday by the Government.

Attorneys representing the Secretary of the Interior filed a motion requesting dismissal of the suit on seven grounds. They contended the plaintiffs had failed to state a cause of action, that they showed by their suit they had insufficient title to the ground to maintain the suit, and that there was "no charge that the Secreary of the Interior is exceeding, or threatening to exceed, his authority" under an act of Congress authorizing acceptance of the land.

Suit Instituted.

Suit was brought by owners of two tracts. They contended their lands had been taken in condemnation proceedings without notice to them and for a grossly inadequate price. On one tract there is a valuable mineral well, while on the others there is timber and a large apple orchard.

Because of inadequate price, the complainants said, they were in effect being deprived of their property without due process of law. They asked that the Secretary be enjoined from accepting title from the State Commission on Conservation and Development, which had acquired title from the owners of the Shenandoah tract.

As additional ground for maintaining the petition should be dismissed, Secretary Ickes said that the commission, an indispensable party, had not been made a defendant. Also, he said the plaintiffs had a complete remedy at law for the taking of their land. The suit is one based on "equity" rules.

To prevent the commission from giving title to the Government, Ickes contended, would be to deprive the commission of the sole function for which it was created. The act of Congress set up the commission for the purpose of taking title from the individual owners and then transmitting the whole to the Government for a Federal park.

Arguments on the motion will be heard next week.

Park Project Faced Financial Troubles

Front Royal, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.). The amount of money designated in the original pledges for the Shenandoah National Park to be used for securing options and to defray other expenses had practically been exhausted before the park project was turned over to the State Commission on Conservation and Development, it was learned at the commission's National Park office here today.

At the same time, William E. Carson, chairman of the commission, revealed that Senator Byrd, then Governor of the State, and a group of the larger contributors, including Fred W. Scott, William T. Reed, the Norfolk & Western Railroad and others, had come to the aid of the project in this emergency and made available the sum of $250,000 for carrying on the work.

Pledges Carried Clause.

The pledges used in securing contributions to the park fund carried a clause specifying that of each $6 pledged $1 was to be used for securing options for the purchase of land and for such other expenses as might be incurred in furtherance of the project.

Of the portion of the pledged funds thus designated for expenses, the Shenandoah National Park Association, Inc., an organization promoting the park in its early stages, expended $116,669.07, of which $110,000 appears to have been paid to the Bankers Service Corporation, of New York and Connecticut, for promotional services, the balance of $6,669.07 covering the expenses of the local organization.

Assuming that the pledges collected totaled considerably less than $1,000,000, as indicated at the park office, it is very easy to figure out that a small amount indeed remained for operating expenses when the commission came along, and that the Shenandoah National Park would have been left high and dry had the commission been dependent on this balance alone for carrying the project on to its conclusion.

Carson Statement.

"In this dilemma," said Mr. Carson, "a group of the larger contributors, headed by Senator Byrd, who was then Governor of the State, and including such outstanding contributions as Fred W. Scott, William T. Reed, the Norfolk & Western Railroad and others, very graciously released their contributions from the operation of the restrictive clause and placed the sum of approximately $250,000 at the disposal of the commission to carry on its work.

"It was this fund that made practicable the activities of the commission in promoting and acquiring the park, since practically all the available funds for promoting and purchasing the park area had been used up by the Shenandoah National Park Association, Inc., in its own expenses and in fees paid to the Bankers Service Corporation, which it employed to secure contributions."

Sergt. Talley, Ace Detective, Is Found Dead

Member of Capital Force Received 8 Citations for Work.

Detective Sergt. Carleton Talley, commended officially at least eight times for his exceptional service and bravery as a police officer, was found dead in bed early yesterday at his home, 2311 Randolph street northeast. Heart disease was the apparent cause of death.

Attached to the clothing and jewelry squad in the Detective Bureau, Sergt. Talley was to have reported for duty at 8 a. m. as relief for Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett. He seemed in excellent health when he went off duty Thursday, fellow officers said.

When Mrs. Talley went to awaken her husband yesterday morning, he failed to respond. She called a physician, who pronounced him dead.

Immediately Mrs. Talley telephoned her husband's brother, Police Lieut. Clarence Talley, who was on duty at headquarters.

Won Two Other Citations.

In addition to his eight citations during his 15 years with the police force, Sergt. Talley was to have received two other commendations this week for outstanding duty performed since November 1 in the recovery of a large amount of jewelry stolen a few weeks ago.

Among the accomplishments for which Sergt. Talley was commended was a citation for "good work in connection with the arrest of the murderers of Mannie Solomon."

His commendations included those for assistance in the apprehension of Ludy Robinson, wanted for murder; his aid in the apprehension of Garry Robert and Charles Owen, suspects in the death of James H. Lane; the apprehension of two men in a Sanitary Grocery Co. robbery; his part in the apprehension of four men wanted for robbery, this commendation having been made by Assistant United States Attorney John J. Sirica; for cooperation and apprehension of three men wanted for hold-ups; for the capture of two men who held up a Diamond taxicab and the recovery of most of the stolen money.

Received Reward From Prince

Sergt. Talley also was permitted to accept a reward given by Prince and Princess Kaya for service rendered during their visit to Washington in September.

During the World War, Sergt. Talley served in the Army Medical School. He was mustered out in 191, and shortly afterward joined the Police Department. He became a sergeant in July, 1925.

Surviving Sergt. Talley are his widow, Mrs. Frances Talley; a daughter, Virginia, 10; a son, John, 7; his mother, Mrs. Cora B. Talley, and two brothers, Clarence and Perry Talley.

police funeral, with burial in Arlington National Cemetery. Private services will be held at the home of his mother, 1700 Third street northeast, Monday, at 1:30 p. m.

Conductor Is Sued By Railway Union

Frederick, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Charging false representation, the Order of Railway Conductors has filed suit in the circuit court to recover $1,000 from Sheley Carey, Brunswick.

The suit alleges Carey drew relief from the organization after an accident and concealed the fact that he had received approximately $13,500 from the railroad company as compensation.

The plaintiff stated Carey was injured June 16, 1929, and after the company's settlement applied for relief in a sworn statement that he had no other income except $1.50 a day from the railroad. The association declared it paid Carey about $555.80.

Suspect Is Citizen Of 'Eastern Coast'

Baltimore, Nov. 16 (AP).—When Secret Service agents arrested George Lafayette King, alias Merrick, alias Merritt, on a charge of passing a $20 counterfeit bill here today, they were tempted to give his address as "Eastern Seaboard, U. S. A."

After he was taken into custody today, King gave his address as 535 West 122d street, New York; in an overcoat he was wearing, a custom tailor's tag gave his address as a number on Park road, Washington.

Police records revealed King was arrested in Washington on a gambling charge in 1932. At that time, he gave the name of "Merritt" and his address as Greensboro, N. C.

Girl Identifies Man In Auto-Theft Case

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—John T. Cacace, one of the three defendants standing trial in Federal Court here in connection with the activities of a Philadelphia-Norfolk automobile theft ring, was positively identified today by one Government witness as the mysterious "James H. Sawyer" that is figuring prominently in the trial.

The witness was Miss Mina Lee Hurd, an employe of a real estate firm.

The case is centered about "James H. Sawyer," who figured prominently in the transfer and sale of stolen cars. Sawyer, the Government contends, is a fictitious character.

Supererogation.

Senator Vandenberg's proposal of "a virtual coalition government," excluding Chairman Farley or Postmaster General Farley, sounds like a mouse trying to impose terms of peace on the lion. In both the House and the Senate the Democrats will have almost a three-fourths majority. Whether the Republicans cooperate or get in the way of the steamroller, their influence probably will not change the character of the Administration's program.

A "coalition" should not be necessary to induce the minority party to pass judment upon every project sponsored by President Roosevelt in accord with "its inherent merits." Narrow partisanship and negative obstruction are not even good politics. Any minority party should exercise discretion in opposing Administration measures as a matter of course.

The chief danger seems to lie not in obstructive opposition, but in the failure of the minority to fulfill its traditional function. An alert and intelligent opposition which can demand full consideration of every Administration project is one of the acute needs of the hour. The Senator from Michigan could far better employ his energy on this side of the congressional ledger.

No doubt the underlying motive of Senator Vandenberg's statement was to emphasize the anomalous position of Postmaster General Farley. Now that the elections are over, however, it should not be necessary to make a political issue of the New Deal's genial dispenser of patronage. His dual status has become so embarrassing to the Administration that the silence of partisans may be all that is necessary to effect a rational division of functions between the Postoffice Department and the Democratic National Committee.

Fumes At Blair School.

Talk of a "strike" by the parents of children attending the Blair School is not a novelty. Many threats of this kind have been made before. Unless an extensive program of school modernization is soon instituted, such demonstrations may become as common as walkouts by organized labor.

The heating plant of which complaint is made was installed while Chester A. Arthur was in the White House. No further argument is needed to establish the necessity of its replacement. Even if the plant were still in good condition, its obsolescence would seem to furnish ample reason for acceding to the wishes of the perturbed parents at the earliest practical opportunity.

Apparently the Commissioners are well aware of the unsatisfactory service rendered by the 26 ancient hot-air furnaces still operating in Washington schools. But appropriations for modernization of school facilities are so meager that many institutions must be neglected. Under present conditions about all they can do is to take care of the most pressing needs and trust to luck for the maintenance of tolerable conditions in schools with heating apparatus that is no longer dependable.

It goes without saying that, if the complaints of the Blair-Hayes Parent-Teacher Association are well founded, the school should be closed until new heating equipment can be installed. But, after all, this threatened strike is only one incident in a long train of events illustrating the urgent need of more funds for the improvement of our schools. It is unfortunate that the dramatic appeal of the women who fear the health of their children is being undermined at Blair School can not be carried to the doors of Congress.

"All Good Books . . ."

They say that the depression has caused more people to turn to the writing of fiction than at any other time in history. Fortunately or unfortunately most of these give up at the sign of the first rejection slip. Learning to write at all is not easy; learning to write well is far more difficult. For one reason, stiff thinking is a prerequisite.

Ernest Hemingway has written many books, and he has written them very well. In many respects he is one of our best authors. In Esquire this month he writes about writing. He sets up a rather difficult standard for the writer. But if more authors would take it to heart and keep their scribbled foolscap locked in a desk drawer until they can honestly say that what Mr. Hemingway says fits them, the current reading lists would show marked improvement.

Says Mr. Hemingway: "All good books are alike in that they are truer than if they had really happened, and after you are finished reading one you will feel that all that happened to you and afterward it all belongs to you; the good and the bad, the ecstasy, the remorse and the sorrow, and people and the places and how the weather was. If you can get so you can give that to people, then you are a writer."

That is the best test of reading a good book. To how many novels, recent or from the five-foot shelf, can it be applied? We wager that anybody's list, even that of the emotionally responsive, would not be too lengthy.

A Costly Method.

For each $2,000 spent on Government construction, past experience indicates that full-time employment can be provided for one man for the period of a year. At that rate, the $3,200,000,000 originally placed at the disposal of the PWA should have provided work for 1,600,000 persons for a full year. Secretary Ickes, however, making a public appeal for an extension of the public works program, states with evident pride that over 600,000 individuals were directly employed on public works projects in August, more than a year after the PWA started to function.

At that time, the contracts awarded covered allotments amounting to $1,500,000,000—a sum which experts consider adequate to supply 750,000 men with full-time work for an entire year. Although the PWA has never furnished comprehensive data on the volume of full-time employment supplied or the cost per man of furnishing jobs, it is certain that during the first year of operation it fell far short of the average performance that might have been expected of it.

Under the most favorable conditions public works provide a slow, costly and uncertain method of relieving unemployment. As a result, the expected stimulus from governmental construction activity generally fails to meet expectations, as has been the case with the PWA.

Before the country is asked to embark upon a more lavish spending program, it is at least entitled to an accounting from the Public Works Administration. So far we have had to be content with estimates of the number of men directly employed upon public projects on a given date, and vague conjectures as to the numbers indirectly employed in supplying materials for construction purposes. What we need to know is how many additional jobs have been created as a result of the PWA's activities over a period of time, and how much it has cost the Government per man to provide them.

It is also well to remember that when PWA funds are exhausted, the men now employed will again be jobless unless further indebtedness is incurred to provide more work. The plea of Secretary Ickes for an enlargement of the public works program is a confession that the plan has failed to produce the predicted stimulus to the heavy goods industries and thus to provide greater private employment. On the contrary, the heavy industries are still operating at low ebb, and if the Government continues to increase the nonproductive public debt of the country by outlays for public works, private initiative is more likely to be discouraged than assisted to expand.

The construction industry, which at its 1928 peak accounted for an annual expenditure of about $11,000,000,000, can not prosper without a revival of private investment activity. And budgetary deficits created by expensive and relatively ineffective projects for putting idle men to work weaken investment confidence and thus prevent men from finding employment in private industry.

On The Right Track.

A legislative program calling for reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Commission without encroachment upon its independent character seems to be foreshadowed in two recent addresses by high officials. Speaking in New York after a conference with the President, Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Coordinator of Transportation, urged extension of the commission's authority over motor lines, airways and other carriers, and emphasized the necessity of nonpartisan regulation. Almost simultaneously, Chairman Rayburn, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, scotched the idea that there is need for a "grand new scheme of regulation." "We can not afford," he said, "to throw the regulation of transportation into the maelstrom of party politics."

Opinions of this tenor from the President's chief adviser on railroad matters, and from the head of the Congressional committee which is likely to draft a far-reaching transportation bill at the coming session, are of more than passing significance. Some of the President's advisers are trying to extend White House control over the transportation system. It has been suggested that a new department be created with a Secretary of Transportation in the Cabinet. Stiff opposition to such a backward step, coming as it does from officials who are most likely to influence the Administration's policy, may be regarded as a silver lining in the dark cloud hanging over the railroads.

It is crystal clear from Mr. Eastman's remarks that he expects control of the railroads to remain in the I. C. C. Furthermore, he expects other transportation agencies to be brought under the same jurisdiction. Free-for-all transportation, he says, has never worked; it inevitably leads to demoralization. Yet the public is entitled to the cheapest, safest and best means of conveyance by responsible operators. The door to progress must be kept open, while the waste and confusion resulting from duplicated service is being eliminated.

Under the present set-up regulation is both inequitable and ineffective because it is limited to one group of carriers. Creation of separate commissions would not remedy this deficiency for obvious reasons. A transportation department amenable to political interests might usher in more problems than it could solve. Extension of the I. C. C., without impairing its independence of action, is unquestionably the most reasonable approach to this difficult problem yet suggested.

Another "Gold Crisis."

The gold standard appears to have survived two political crises coming in close succession—the downfall of the Doumergue government in France and the resignation of the de Brocqueville ministry in Belgium. The Belgium overthrow in particular created alarm because a movement to devalue the currency has gained considerable headway there, and this country is regarded as the weakest link in the gold bloc coalition.

Belgium, like the rest of the gold bloc area, is suffering from the competition of industries located in countries with depreciated currencies. Her problem, like that of France, Holland and Switzerland, is how to reduce domestic production costs sufficiently to meet the lower prices of goods coming from countries no longer on the gold standard.

The gold bloc countries are in a technically strong position, as they have abundant gold reserves and their budgetary situations afford no cause for alarm. Nevertheless, their morale has been lowered by the depressing effects of falling prices, and the situation is made worse by realization that further price declines are essential if export outlets are to be retained. That explains why the sentiment in favor of devaluation has made such headway of late.

In both Belgium and France, however, the people feel a deep aversion for any policy that necessitates tinkering with the currency, because of the costly experiences of the post-war years. Both the Catholic and the Liberal blocs in the Belgian Parliament have just gone on record as opposed to devaluation. That is equivalent to a declaration that they will support a policy of public and private retrenchment that will enable them to remain on the gold standard.

In France opposition to devaluation is reflected not only in the prolonged political struggle to effect budgetary economies and bring down living costs, but also in an increased willingness to assist other gold standard countries by granting trade concessions. Discussions looking toward closer cooperation for such purposes have been carried on recently both in Geneva and at Brussels.

It is too soon, of course, to determine whether the desire to remain on the gold standard and fear of monetary experimentation will triumph over the forces that are slowly undermining the resolution of these people. Much depends on how soon the United States and Great Britain agree to cooperate for the purpose of ending the present instability of world currencies. If they delay too long, a breach will almost certainly be made in the united front presented by the gold bloc countries. That might be a prelude to a new and even more demoralizing period of currency fluctuations, which would unsettle both sterling and the dollar and undo all the progress that has been made toward a fixed relationship between these currencies and gold.

350,000 Saved!

What appears to have been an effort to get the CCC workers to think about something besides chopping down trees has, as it were, been nipped in the bud by Robert Fechner.

The director of the CCC camps has taken over responsibility for the moral and spiritual as well as the economic welfare of some 350,000 young men. Had it not been for his ardent censorship all these wood-chopping and road-building victims of the depression might have learned by now the awful truths that some machines take away some jobs, that other machines create jobs, and that the hope of the world lies in its youth.

In effect Mr. Fechner has accused the American Council on Education and the United States Office of Education of trying to circulate subversive propaganda among impressionable youngsters under his care. Had he not squelched "You and Machines," Dr. William F. Ogburn's pamphlet, who knows what terrible thing might have happened! Suppose some youth had read this anarchistic statement: "Man is becoming more and more dependent upon machines," or even, "* * * our standard of living has been greatly raised by the machine."

But Mr. Fechner has saved the day.

A hick town is a place where a man can be comfortably successful with half the energy it would take for him to make a bare living in the city.

It is usually the case that a person who asks your advice does so because of the opportunity it affords to tell you his troubles.

"Dirty Politics."

(From The New Republic)

One election story, based on rumor for which we can not vouch, is worth repeating. California interests opposed to Sinclair, so it alleges, approached an underworld character in New York, one of whose sources of income is supplying crooked voting machines. They offered him a large sum of money to ship a consignment to Los Angeles, to be substituted for the genuine variety. After pondering the offer, he declined. Sinclair, he said, was trying to abolish poverty, and he did not want to ruin his chances. That would be dirty politics.

Letters to the Editor

Old Soldiers Never Die.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Consternation so thick that you could have sliced it like cheese, hung over the lower brackets at Thomas B. Bryan School yesterday—and it was all The Post's fault. I gathered as much from the conversation of a couple of coeds—Dolores, 7, and Donne Lee, 5.

Anxiety was written all over their faces when they reached the house at lunch time. As they charged through the door, they were shouting "Is Santy Claus dead?" with the stress on the first word, showing they devoutly hoped the answer would be no.

From what they said, it didn't seem possible that much work could have been done in the first and second grades during the morning hours. School hadn't taken up yet when the word was passed around that The Post said Santy Claus was dead, and showed a picture of him.

I expect the student body hopped about in excitement and horror all morning, perhaps gathering in little knots to discuss the disaster. They couldn't have put much heart into their work.

BILL BENTLEY.
Washington, Nov. 14.

The Football War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe the Board of Education, the superintendent and the assistant superintendent of our schools are deserving of the utmost condemnation for the manner in which they handled the recent football controversy in our high schools.

In the first place, there was absolutely no occasion for all the fuss they made and started over nothing. In the heat of the desire to win for their school and glory, two of the players made a pass at one another. It was all over in so short a time (about 3 or 4 seconds, to be exact) that even the referee did not see any blows struck. When the two principals involved in the "disgraceful fight" met in the corridors of the Franklin School a couple of days later, they grinned and shook hands. There was no occasion for the drastic action taken by the school officials.

The main trouble, and the one that has been overlooked for some reason or other, was the lack of police protection, which had been asked for on several occasions and was not furnished at this or other high school games. Be it remembered that these games are exceedingly popular and are attended by some 4,000 or 5,000 students and outsiders. So it would seem the students and the players are being made the goat in the whole analysis. I think the high school board, the superintendent and the board of principals should be made publicly to admit their blunder and remove the stigma they have placed on the good name and character of the boys and girls who attend our high schools.

A BROKEN-HEARTED STUDENT.

We Can't Help The News.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a subscriber to your valued paper, I can not let pass without remonstrance this glaring headline, "U. S. Ready to Dare Japan to Naval Race and Sea Supremacy," which appeared on the front page of The Post of November 12 in the most prominent position possible.

When you were a boy did you ever take a "dare"? Do you want Little Boy Japan to take Big Boy U. S.'s "dare"? "Alas and alack and alacker!" She seems only too ready to do so.

When we (the U. S.) have issued the defi, are your boys going to offer themselves as targets in the ensuing slaughter? Are you subsidized by the munitions manufacturers?

The mischief is done. The dare is given. I see no amende honorable that can be offered. What do you think was the reaction at the Japanese Embassy? Do you think they smilingly swallowed the affront with their coffee—or whatever their substitute is?

I am, sir, a very outraged protester. AGNES GODFREY GAY.

Decisive Factors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Prof. Kelly Miller, published in your issue of November 9, is extremely interesting by reason of Prof. Miller's claim that "the Negro vote was undoubtedly the decisive factor in the victory." If my memory is correct that was aalso his claim in th Republican victory of 1928.

His letter makes me wonder to what he will attribute the election or defeat of Senator Borah in 1936. Could he not give us now a prediction? HARRY O. WARD.
Washington, Nov. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of November 10, Kelly Miller attempts to defend the recent election as an "emphatic and impressive indorsement of the New Deal." To those who are prone to jump at conclusibnis, this appears to be the case. However, if we sift the facts, we are likely to find that this was merely a rubber stamp approval and not a real indorsement.

According to the American Federation of Labor, there are still more than 10,000,000 unemployed throughout the country. Of this number approximately one-third are receiving Federal aid. This vast army of unemployed holds the balance of power, and when they vote en masse it swings the election. Undoubtedly their vote was the decisive factor in the election of November 6. This ratio of colored persons receiving Federal aid is far in excess of the white ratio, and Mr. Miller states that the colored voter contributed heavily to the New Deal. Yes, and so heavy was this contribution that in Chicago they elected a colored Democrat to Congress to replace a colored Republican in a heavy Republican district.

It was on this large army of unemployed that Democrats politicians and soothsayers worked the hardest. Those on the relief rolls were told time and again that unless they voted for the "New Deal," Federal relief would stop. With the so-called New Deal campaign being waged by a graduate of the Tammany Academy of Political Science, and with Federal funds flowing freely before election, is it any wonder that the "New Dealers" came out on top?

POLITICAL OBSERVER.
Washington, Nov. 12.

No Naval Race!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The naval parley between Great Britain, Japan and the United States seems to be failing, as such parleys always have failed and for the same reason. Who would expect a group of admirals to work for naval reduction? As professional men they naturally want to improve and increase their organizations.

The Naval Conference of 1935 is still ahead of us. If we do not want the United States to help launch a suicidal naval race we must insist that the President send civilian delegates with a sincere determination to reduce the world's navies by international agreement. I hope The Post editorials and cartoons will urge the selection of such delegates.

The Classic Mind.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Hats Off!" Who is the guy who has been journalizing Aristotle's "reductio ad absurdum?"

Some of your editorials are getting luscious, do you know?

No Bird Love?

These scientists who inquire critically into life, human and otherwise, often upset our preconceived notions of things and thus bring disturbance to what would otherwise be placid minds. Charles Darwin many years ago set self-appointed aristocrats on their ears when he announced the probability that they, with all their finely chiseled features and their fancied superiority, and the great apes of Africa had a common ancestor.

The latest scientific disturber of the peace is Dr. Herbert Friedman, biologist of the Smithsonian Institution. He bursts upon a joyous world, still celebrating the unprecedented Republican debacle, with the disquieting and disillusioning statement that there is no such thing as bird love. He has discovered this after long and laborious investigation. Mates do not care for each other nor for their offspring. If they seem to reveal affection, it is merely a matter of instinct, or, perhaps, good manners for public consumption like the kiss of husband and wife just before the Reno-bound train comes in sight.

Many observers of bird life will disagree with the doctor, despite his show of finality in giving conclusions in this matter. Who has not seen the mother of a brood of Virginia partridges put on an act that would put the late Sarah Bernhardt to shame for her art pretending that she was desperately wounded in order to divert attention from her young while they scurried to safety? The doctor may call this instinct, if he will, but it also is a revelation of parental concern. And it is well authenticated that if one of a flock of wild geese in flight is wounded, two of the party will swoop down, place their wings under the distressed bird and bear it along. It is also true, we believe, that the members of this same feathered tribe mate for life. There is no Reno for the goose and gander. Yet the learned doctor says there is no such thing as bird love—no evidence but that our feathered friends are wholly self-centered and as emotionless as a Vermont backwoodsman.

With all due respect for his erudition, we can not accept his findings. For one thing, agreement with him would render inept a time-honored description of two young people obviously enamoured of each other. Could the doctor suggest any substitute for "lovey-dovey?"

(Richmond Times Dispatch.)

The Post Impressionist

Fine Feathers

Post Office, Saturday.

WHEN White House callers begin to wear pink vests, the appearane of the White House lawn will be improved.

When Treasury officials sport yellow collars on their way to work, Lafayette square will be happier.

And on that spring day when Mall strollers don rainbow coats, the cherry blossoms will blush with delight.

All this we learn by applying to Washington the principles laid down in a letter from London. The writer of the epistle is an artist, a member of the Royal Academy.

It seems that W. Russell Flint, R. A., believes there is too little color in human habiliments. The lack, he says, is bad for landscape effects. And it is bad, he says, for the habiliment wearers.

* * *

In our cloistered nook here we were not aware that modernity was color-starved. Of its inanimate accessories, the London Times recently declared: "There is gay color in all kinds of things which, in the Victorian era, were colorless, or only faintly tinted—hot-water bags, tooth brushes, sauce pans, sheets." And we were under the impression that there was a sufficient color-advance in the sartorial field.

Well, there isn't enough to satisfy Flint, R. A., anyhow.

He contends that the most lovely countryside is rendered more lovely by people even brighter dressed than people are today. He argues, moreover, that the plainest person can achieve attractiveness by means of gayer garments, that these make the homely wearer pretty—or "striking," as the case may be—and make the pretty or "striking" beautiful or handsome. What they make the already beautiful and handsome he is apparently at a loss to describe. And he launches his thesis in that same London Times.

Now, it is no easy task to get a letter into the London Times. You either have to be somebody whose position entitles you to a hearing, whether you have something worth utterance or not—or else you have to have something to utter which compels attention, whether you have position or not. So these announcements of Flint, R. A., must be worthy of consideration.

The question comes home to The Washington Post with especial poignancy, because The Post is a great advocate of country walks as productive of health, tranquility and aesthetic improvement. Whereas Flint, R. A., avers that walking costumes are the chief offenders.

We regret to report that this allegation is substantiated by hurried inquiries from our own department of The Post to the department dealing with fashions. We hadn't forgotten—who could forget?—certain dreadful conglomerations of color which invaded sports clothes a few years ago. But now we learn that these have been driven out, and that there has set in a reaction which carries at least walking-clothes to the Puritanic extreme.

Walkers have taken again to tweeds. Tweeds are dull in tint. Hence the complaint of Flint, R. A.

"Why," he wails, "do lean-limbed young men and shapely damsels effect ugly potato-color and khaki while merely taking a walk? Is biking now so stern a business that only the ugliest shades of war-time are considered appropriate?"

And, thus far, echo has answered precisely nothing.

It is our opinion that echo is awaiting instructions from The Post Wanderbirds. At least in Washington, this whole matter becomes Wanderbirdish.

In case you, gentle reader, are—like the present gentle writer—so unfortunate as never to have flown a flight with the feathered covey in question, let us explain:

The Wanderbirds are a group of enthusiastic Washington Post readers, headed by Mr. Robert Shosteck, who every Sunday (we trust, after church-time) take a walk—beg pardon: take a hike—through one or other of the many delightful landscapes within decent distance of the District. About all you have to do is to watch this intelligent newspaper for notices of their route and meeting-place, then go the latter and follow, in excellent company, the former.

It's a splendid idea. If you ask us why we ourselves don't profit by it, "our sole reply will be" that we suffer from chronic physical lassitude: drugs and doctors have for years proved vain. Nevertheless, we are broadminded enough to be able to admire where we are unable to emulate. So, to any nimble lass or lad, to every mature Washingtonian, who is not smitten with our own disease, we unreservedly recommend Wanderbird-membership.

What, then, is the attitude of the Wanderbirds vis-a-vis the demand of Flnit, R. A., for gayer garbs on gallivanters?

Do they tremble in tweeds or applaud in reds and purples?

Mr. Shosteck is doing a whole lot to show the Wanderbirds the beauties of the countryside. But is everything possible being done to show the countryside the beauties of the Wanderbirds?

Aviation Needs Better Budget Consideration

Appropriation by Legislation Should Go, Says Representative.

By Brig. Gen. H. J. Reilly
O. R. C.

WHERE does the responsibility lie for the failure of Army aviation to have the equipment necessary for night flying? This was one of the primary causes of the still unsettled dispute between the Secretary of War and the House Military Affairs Committee because of that committee's charges against Gen. Foulois, chief of the Army Aviation Corps.

This is undoubtedly one of the reasons why the Howell Aviation Committee is for the first time holding its hearings behind closed doors. Many of the same Army officers who are now being examined in these private hearings were witnesses before the House Military Affairs Committee investigation and the subsequent special Baker board, convened by the Secretary of War.

The question is important because the system, which was the fundamental cause for this lack of essential equipment brought to light by the air mail tragedies, is still in existence. It is also important because this system is now in the midst of the first step of its yearly operation, which terminates when passed by Congress, the annual appropriation bills become law.

This first step consists in the conferences now going on between the Bureau of the Budget and the executive departments. In them the items are determined which make up the budget sent to Congress on the basis for these annual appropriation bills.

• • • •

UNLESS the Howell committee decides to, and succeeds in, impressing the public with the responsibility of this system for our aviation deficiencies, it is probably only a question of time until other deficiencies of equal importance will be uncovered by some similar scandal.

The system, which consists of working the budget law backward, was first put into full play during the Administration of President Coolidge. The budget law contemplates the executive departments' sending of a budget to Congress, showing the amounts needed to carry out policies laid down by law. Then, if Congress does not see fit to spend such amounts, it is the departments' business to modify these policies so they will work with less money.

By "working the budget backward" is meant that instead of doing this an executive order sets a limiting figure for each department within which it must keep its budget. This is done whether or not the amount permits the policies laid down by law to be carried out.

These budgets are then sent to "the Hill," labeled War Department Budget, Navy Department Budget, and so forth. From the point of view of the budget law they are not exactly "budgets" because they do not show the sums necessary to carry out the policies laid down by Congress.

• • • •

THE evil results are two. The first is "legislation by appropriation." By this is meant changing policies by failing to appropriate any money to carry out some project which is law, or putting in funds to carry out one which is not. The second is that the responsibility for the omission from the budget of necessary funds, because of the limiting figure, is always placed upon the executive department concerned.

Legislation by appropriation is caused by the friends of items insufficiently provided for, or left out entirely, using their influence "on the Hill" to have inserted what they want in the appropriation bill. Frequently this is done by taking the money away from some other item. This, of course, spoils the effort of the department concerned to distribute equitably the cut necessitated by the limiting figure.

During the past few years, while Mr. Collins of Mississippi, just defeated, was chairman of the military sub-committee of the House Appropriation Committee, legislation by appropriation was used to an extent which practically changed our military policies. In fact, in some of his opening speeches when introducing the Army appropriation bill, he openly laid down and advocated drastic changes.

• • • •

GEN. SUMMERALL, when Chief of Staff, proved to the Military Affairs Committee of the House, when his statement of that fact was challenged, that either the existing military policies under law had to be cut down drastically or else more money had to be voted in order to carry them out. His written proof was marked "secret" and forgotten. Neither alternative was followed.

Mr. Harry Ransley, of Pennsylvania just elected for his ninth consecutive term and for many years a member of the House Military Affairs Committee, recently told this writer that we will never have a consistently developed, economical and efficient national defense until we do two things.

First, he said, "we must abolish legislation by appropriation by seeing that appropriation bills carry no items which change established policies. The appropriation committee must not do more than say how much or how little is to be spent on policies already law." Also, he added, "we must see that the War Department budget, when sent to Congress, shows the complete amounts needed to carry out the policies established by law. This would in no way prevent the Budget Bureau recommending even a considerably smaller expenditure. It would, however, leave to Congress the question of deciding how far policies established by law needed to be altered to keep expenditures within the desired limits."

Typewriter Culture.

TYPEWRITER lovers all over the country will be heartened by the news that Mrs. Roosevelt has become enlisted in their cause. She has signed up for six lectures on the Columbia network's Child Education program, one of which has already been given and the second one will come tomorrow night.

BARGERON

In giving these talks she is assisting the movement "being promoted by the Typewriter Educational Research Bureau." But perhaps it is better to give in full the announcement in telegraphic form which has come into my hands.

"Starting Sunday, November 11 and five consecutive additional Sundays thereafter Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will broadcast over Columbia network on Child Education introducing need of portable typewriters in modern education stop this movement being promoted by Typewriter Educational Research Bureau and sponsored by all manufacturers of portables including Smith Corona stop Broadcasts will be heard from 7:45 to 8 p. m., Eastern standard time stop.

• • • • •

The announcement read, "introducing need of portable typewriters in modern education." Of course, this is a slip on the part of some enthusiastic salesman with a commercial mind. Mrs. Roosevelt has not gone in for selling typewriters. As the First Lady she is deeply interested in typewriter culture and the problems that have arisen from the widespread practice of having portable typewriters around the house, and the affect they have upon the lives of our children, the grown-ups of tomorrow.

It was to study the problems growing out of this condition that the Typewriter Educational Research Bureau was formed sometime ago. In this instance it was a case of the typewriter manufacturers beating Columbia University and our other more advanced institutions of higher learning to another course of higher learning, though it is not wholly impossible that in view of Research Bureau's findings, courses in the treatment of the typewriter in the home may yet be established. Particularly is it possible that Columbia University may do this because it is always on the alert for more courses.

• • • •

But to get back to the findings of the Research Bureau—they are what brought Mrs. Roosevelt into the matter. Back in the old days, the bureau found, typewriters were no great problem because they were confined to the office. The risks from them were no greater than one would expect in an industrial nation. Occasionally, one of the things wore out a man's fingers or toppled from a desk onto his feet. But they were no real problem when it was considered that far more people were injured in bathtubs.

It was with the introduction of the smaller or portable make that typewriters came to have a definite bearing on our children. You can get one so cheap or for such a small payment down that men got into the habit of buying one on the way home, pretty much as it had been their custom to buy their wife a box of candy.

• • • •

We all know that the home is not the well-kept-up unit it used to be. The father is engaged in his work and the mother is engrossed with the activities that have come to be a part of every woman's life. The result is that the youngsters are left pretty much to themselves. When it comes to their being left to themselves with portable typewriters lying all around the house, a situation is created which needs studying. Not any loose or biased studying, either. But study by people who can approach a subject with an open mind.

What we are manifestly up against is the question of whether we intend to let the portables in the homes master the children or whether we shall teach children to master the portables.

Out of 441 class cases the Research Bureau studied it was found that in 292.5 instances the mother came home from some creative work and found the little baby with its tiny toes and fingers hopelessly entangled in the machine. This is an appalling percentage.

New Faces in the Senate — — Sherman Minton of Indiana

A Soldier Who Fought the Bonus Is Ardent New Dealer.

This is the eighth of a series of sketches of the newly elected Senators, written by competent observers. Another will appear in this space on Monday.

By Mark Thistlewaite.
(Washington Correspondent, Indianapolis News).

SHERMAN MINTON.

SENATOR-ELECT SHERMAN MINTON, of Indiana, is a new political figure. Until nominated at the Democratic convention last June, he was relatively unknown in his State save in American Legion circles and among collegiates who remembered his athletic prowess at Indiana University. As a politician he had not won his spurs. As a lawyer he was young. He had held no elective office. As public counsellor for the Indiana public service commission he was steadily establishing a reputation when the lure of Washington beckoned him. Only as a Legionaire who had founded the New Albany post in his home city and served as judge advocate of the Indiana State Department had his activities attracted more than ordinary attention.

As a candidate Minton promptly won recognition. He started a whirlwind attack on the opposition. Before the campaign was fairly under way the people of Indiana learned the Democrats had picked a fighter to head their ticket and Senator Arthur R. Robinson, who was up for reelection, had reason to know his opponent was not a mere seeker of office.

• • • •

FIRST crack out of the box, the soldier-candidate, who had been under fire at Soissons and Verdun, refused to indorse the soldiers' bonus. Despite terrific and constant pressure he did not budge throughout the campaign in his opposition to this popular proposal. Disabled veterans always would have his sympathetic consideration, he said, and no legislation working an injustice to any veteran or his widow or family ever would have his support. But not until the National Treasury could stand the strain would he vote to pay the bonus to able-bodied veterans, who, like himself, had come out of the war unharmed.

"We are all veterans of the depression," he said. "Most of us have lost our shirts and pants and we must reach shore together or sink together."

Throughout the campaign which was bitter and hard-fought, Minton stuck to national issues. A conservative by nature and training, he defended the New Deal with an ardor that carried conviction. He assailed all enemies of the Roosevelt Administration, paying especial attention to Robinson's Senate record, which he analyzed and denounced. In his speeches he placed human rights above the rights of property and wealth, stressing the need of social readjustments to promote justice. Backed by a majority approaching 60,000, he comes to Washington a virile supporter of the Administration's program.

MINTON is a rugged individual of the athletic type, powerfully-built, erect and somewhat grim. He has a protruding jaw which his friends say denotes strength and which may also denote stubborness as some Indiana veterans have suggested. He is a good talker and handsome in a masculine way. His platform presence is not unlike that of former Senator James E. Watson, but he lacks the tricks that made the latter superb on the stump. He is 44 years old, loves to write limericks and tells a good story well.

In college Minton was a slugging outfielder on the baseball team and an impregnable football guard. He won his letters on the track, also. Moreover, he was a good student, graduating in law at the head of his class in 1915 and winning a scholarship to Yale's school of law from which he graduated one year later, again with scholastic honors. He was born October 20, 1890, on a farm in Floyd County, which is a part of the "knob" district of southern Indiana.

Returning to New Albany to start the practice of law, Minton within a year was in the first Fort Benjamin Harrison Officers' Training camp at Indianapolis. He was commissioned a captain of infantry and assigned to the Eighty-fourth Division. Following the armistice he served with the American Army of occupation. His eldest child, Sherman, jr., was born while he was in France. One of his fellow-officers in the Eighty-fourth Division was his recent opponent, Senator Robinson. Another coincident is that Minton and Robinson are both members of the Phi Delta Theta college fraternity.

Home from overseas, Minton resumed the practice of law and commenced to flirt with politics. Twice he sought nomination to Congress, but got nowhere. In 1932 he campaigned for Paul V. McNutt, a fellow legionnaire, and when the latter became Governor he named Minton public counselor for the public service commission. Here again he made good. He is credited with having reduced public utility rates in Indiana by $3,200,000 in a little more than a year.

• • • •

PARTY prospects appeared so bright after the 1932 election that numerous Democrats sought the nomination for United States Senator. Minton was among them. The pre-convention campaign was spirited. R. Earl Peters, State chairman until he was deposed by Gov. McNutt, had the favor of National Chairman Farley and took an early lead which he held up to the day of nomination. But a "stop-Peters" movement was successful in the convention and when Gov. McNutt threw the administration forces behind Minton, the college athlete-soldier-lawyer candidate won. The fight had been so bitter, however, as to dim party prospects. The Republicans meanwhile had renominated Robinson without a fight.

At the outset of the campaign national issues were to the fore. With avidity the Republicans went after the New Deal, assailing it as socialistic and demanding a return to sound Constitutional Government. During this period Minton made his only slip, if he made any. Vigorously defending the Administration's relief program, he said the hungry must be fed, the naked must be clothed, work must be created for the unemployed, no one must be permitted to freeze or starve.

"You can't offer a hungry man the Constitution," he hurled at the Republicans. "You can't say to a man hunting a job, 'Here, have a Constitution.' You can't expect the Constitution to take the place of food, fuel and raiment."

Instantly the Republicans pounced on this as proof positive that the Democratic candidate held the Constitution in low esteem and had violated the sancity of our great Charter of Liberties. Minton's words were repeated from every Republican stump. Newspapers flaunted them. It was a "break" for the Republicans and they made the most of it. Minton ignored the excitement he had created. In his own way he continued to discuss the Constitution, insisting it was a flexible and not a rigid document. From time to time he re-expressed the thought of his widely displayed utterance.

Strangely enough, Senator William E. Borah gave thought to Minton's view in almost identic language. Asked by Chicago reporters what of defense of the Constitution as a Republican issue, the Idahoan bruskly replied, "You can't eat the Constitution." He was on his way to Washington after the election.

• • • •

After the Maine election the Indiana Republicans switched from national issues to McNutt and what they termed McNuttism and from then on Minton had difficulty in holding Robinson to discussion of the New Deal. The Republican candidate, after assailing the economy act and pledging eternal support to the veterans, would bring up the State administration and stay with it. Minton continued to insist, however, that he and Robinson were running for the Senate of the United States and not for the State Senate over which the Governor of Indiana might wish some control.

When "Stop McNutt" stickers, placards and posters appeared everywhere, Minton made a speech in which he said "stop" was a good, one-word Republican slogan. Only "back" could be better, he suggested. He said the Republicans wished to stop not only McNutt, Roosevelt, the New Deal and future progress under the recovery program. They wished, he asserted, to go back to the old order and stop all gains. His "Stop and Back" speech was one of the high lights of the campaign.

• • • •

EARLY in life Minton acquired the nickname of Shay through a mispronunciation attributed to a younger brother, and that moniker still clings to him having followed him through grade school, college and France and back to Indiana.

The Senator-elect will be accompanied to Washington by Mrs. Minton and two of their three children—Mary Ann, 10, and John Evan, 8, Sherman, jr., 15, will remain in school in New Albany.

The Once-Over

Cynical Thoughts 16 Years After.

Sixteen years ago this month, the World War ended and preparations for the next one began at once. Sixteen years ago we got rid of Kaiser Wilhelm, jingoism and U boats. And 16 years later we have Huey Long, Adolf Hitler and two tax collectors in every garage.

• • • •

Sixteen years ago guns boomed on all fronts, signaling that the Allies had crushed Germany to the earth and would themselves be flat on their backs for the next quarter of a century.

• • • •

Horns tooted everywhere, indicating that the world had been made safe for democracy and other bedtime stories.

• • • •

There was dancing in the streets, none of the dancers remotely imagining that the world was merely moving from the slogan, "They shall not pass" to "Wanna buy a duck?"

• • • •

Tons of ticker tape came whirling down from Wall street windows, the brokers little suspecting that they would presently be in No Man's Land and that most of the customers would be in Government interment camps.

• • • •

Cabinets leaped for joy in a dozen capitals, shouting about the triumph of right, justice and honor. And almost immediately reassembled to repudiate debts, laugh at signed contracts and draw up plans for deadlier weapons.

• • • •

Bells rang in city halls and churches. Nobody knew that everybody was set for 16 years of tough sledding except Kaiser Bill, or that he would be one of the few men in the world who would have no trouble meeting expenses for the next two decades.

• • • •

The days of envy, hate, bloodshed, selfishness and incredible cruelties were over . . . brotherly love was proclaimed from the housetops . . . the League of Nations and the disarmament conference opened in a blaze of glory.

• • • •

And then it was discovered that the world had the right play, but the wrong people.

• • • •

Well, why kick? America hasn't done so badly since 1918. It got Mae West, the streamline and Mickey Mouse.

"Gee, we almost forgot the ceremony!"

A Happy Idea

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

ON October 23 of this year the American Booksellers Association, as a gift to the Nation, presented to the library in the White House at Washington 200 books that have been published during the last four years. This is an addition to the 500 books presented in 1930. With E. S. McCawley as chairman, the jury of selection was as follows, with the names in alphabetical order:

Preston Bradley, clergyman; John Chamberlain, critic; Dorothy Canfield Fisher, novelist; Harry Hansen, critic; Joseph Henry Jackson, newspaper editor; Virginia Kirkus, writer; Frederic G. Melcher, editor; Christopher Morley, novelist; Bliss Perry, critic; Julia Peterkin, novelist; William Lyon Phelps, critic; Irita Van Doren, critic; Joseph L. Wheeler, librarian; Sidney Williams, jr., editor; Alexander Woollcott, critic.

• • • •

The method by which the books were chosen was for each member of the committee to send in a list, and the books were chosen from the various lists. The list, therefore, represents a preponderance of individual choices, not a compromise where the members of the committee in joint session more or less reluctantly included some books and left out others. There were no meetings. A majority of choices is always better than a general compromise, or, "If you will vote for such and such a book, I will vote for the book of your choice."

It was a happy idea of the American Booksellers Association, and their gift to the Nation should be highly appreciated. The discussion the published list of titles is sure to arouse is a good thing for the cause of literature.

There is, of course, no space here to print 200 titles, but the classifications are as follows: Biography, history, travel and adventure, poetry, art, drama, belle lettres (these four in one classification), economics, current events, etc., science, etc., miscellaneous, fiction, mysteries, children's books.

• • • •

For the most part, the books are by British and American authors, but there are some translations from European writers; "Little Man, What Now?" is included. A conspicuous book under each classification is "Grover Cleveland," by Allan Nevins; "The Martial Spirit," by Walter Millis; "Brazilian Adventure," by Peter Fleming; "Fatal Interview," by Edna St. Vincent Millay; "Our Times," by Mark Sullivan; "The Story of Gardening," by Richardson Wright; "The Good Earth," by Pearl Buck; "Murder in the Calais Coach," by Agatha Christie; "Exploring With Beebe," by William Beebe.

Suit for Damages Settled by Counsel

West Virginian's Claim Based on Injuries.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 16 (AP).—The damage suit of Bruce Bailey, of Pawpaw, W. Va., against the Consolidated Orchard Co., the Century Indemnity Co. and the State Industrial Accident Commission was settled today by agreement of counsel.

The defendants had claimed lack of jurisdiction, but Judge Albert A. Doub overruled the plea and the case went before a jury in circuit court here yesterday.

Bailey charged he was injured while in the employ of the orchard company.

Directors Are Picked By Cumberland Club

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Three new directors were elected at the annual meeting of the Cumberland Country Club, Inc., last night. They are Dr. Karl P. Heintz, Zebulon M. Hewitt and A. B. Carlson.

Thomas R. Brown, jr., winner of the spring and fall golf tournaments, received the Celanese Cup and the Dreyfus Cup, emblems of the championship. Winners of the flights in the fall tournament also received prizes.

Hagerstown Jury Finds True Bills In 46 Accusations

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—The November grand jury, which adjourned yesterday, returned 46 indictments and made two recommendations in its report.

It recommended that rubbish be removed from the courthouse attic, and that windows in Bellevue, the county home, be tightened to keep out the cold. The report said the courthouse rubbish presents a dangerous fire hazard.

Farmers of Midwest Distrust Paternalism

By Hilding Siversen
(Special Correspondence of The Post).

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 16.—Political and economic commentators are going into ecstasies and rhapsodies of mystical and metaphysical speculation over the recent reactions of the Middle Western rural populations, particularly as regards the generally affirmative vote on the corn-hog program and the decisive results of the recent elections.

Here at the boundary line between a State which went overwhelmingly New Deal and a State which not only went strongly Republican, but also gave an adverse vote on the corn-hog program, is a safe place to observe the play of politico-economic psychology. Which is to say that Missouri went for the New Deal, corn-hog and all, while Kansas went Republican, anticorn-hog, and, for good measure, dry by 75,000 majority, whatever that may signify.

There is bound to be a lot of theory about what is going on in the minds of the Midland farmers. Much of it sounds like pure obscurantist piffle. After all, the thing is not very complex.

I traveled in Kansas a great deal in the war and postwar era and noted conditions then. The Kansas farmers never did take to the paternalistic theory of government, probably because, unlike their brothers of Iowa and, to some extent Missouri, they did not become stampeded into land inflation, and did not go deeply in debt. The McNary-Haugen bill, the debenture bill and similar proposals, never got a very cordial hearing in Kansas. Perhaps the older farmers remembered the virulence of old-time Populist agitation and were vaccinated against it.

The most rabid shouts for Government farm relief came from professional agitators in Iowa, the richest agricultural State of the Midlands, and the big reason was that land values there had become so enormously inflated, partially by the unwisdom of bankers, that many Iowa farmers were ruined by their joint error. The roots of the original grievance were not found in low crop prices, but in high land prices. Any farm economist-psychologist who closes his eyes to that patent fact is getting started off on the wrong track.

• • • •

FACT No. 2 is that the Midland farmers as a whole do not think of the New Deal in terms of "regimentation" — either for or against. They are just as much in favor of individualism as they ever were, but they simply don't think of the present regime as a permanent philosophy of government. In brief, their opinion can be safely summed up in this way: "I don't know just what the New Deal is. I haven't time to study out whether it means the whole Government is to be changed or not. I'll leave that to politicians and statesmen. What I do know is that we have been offered cash loans with which to pay some of our debts, and with this offer comes a method of cutting down production."

With this emergency phase uppermost in mind, they opportunistically and realistically accept the corn-hog program—that is, unless the individual voter happens to have some particularly good reason for not wanting to cut down his own production.

The fact that Kansas farmers rejected the corn-hog program in the plebiscite is, to be sure, one more bit of evidence that the Kansas farmers, as a class, have more of a distrust of paternalism than their neighbors, based on past experience, and this prejudice was added to specific personal objections to the plan.

However this does not mean that the Iowa or Missouri farmers are in favor of a permanent paternalistic system. Far from it. They have gone along with the crowd psychology of the American people from Boston to Los Angeles. That crowd psychology includes an element of fear along with a very large element of hero-worship. In every great emergency the people demand a hero. If they do not have one ready-made they manufacture one.

• • • •

PRESIDENT Roosevelt was fortunate to happen along in time to be the hero, and for two years he has been the personification of the hopes of the great majority. Who cares for details? they ask. Something must be done. It may not be the right thing, but it's something. We may not be moving in the right direction, but we're moving. Try anything once. Kick around fast enough and, like a lion in a net, we may accidentally kick loose from the dismal web of depression.

Some day, when everything has cooled down, and people begin to examine the record, they will discover by business charts that recovery began in the summer of 1932 and may have been actually retarded by additional fears manufactured by the New Deal. But that is not now. Now the New Deal rides triumphant, and the phenomenon is perfectly explainable. There is nothing at all mysterious or mystical about it.

When the sober second thought comes, it will probably be seen that taxes eventually have a way of coming back on the Forgotten Man—not the man pictured by the New Deal, but as pictured by the original author of the phrase, Prof. Sumner. His Forgotten Man is not a habitual or potential recipient of Government benefits, but a man who may have had an income all through the depression. He is the man who works and builds churches and schools and pays taxes.

It will be realized that Papa is the man who wears false whiskers and a fur-bordered red coat at Christmas-time—that Papa is Santa Claus, after all, and Papa always pays the bills eventually, if not now.

Liquor Suspect, Fleeing, Is Shot

Deputies Say He Destroyed Warrant and Ran.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 16 (AP).—Nathan Lucas, 30, of Clearspring, Md., is in a critical condition in Washington County Hospital here from a bullet wound he received last night in an attempted escape from sheriff's deputies.

Lucas, officers said, was shot by Deputy Sheriff Robert F. Taylor when he sought to escape from Taylor and another deputy who had called at Lucas' home to serve a bench warrant charging him with illegal sale of liquor. The deputies said Lucas read the warrant, tore it into pieces, and attempted to flee. They said they commanded him to stop and when he failed to do so, Taylor fired.

Physicians at the hospital said the bullet entered his hip and lodged in his stomach.

Charlottesville Lawyer Purchases Large Tract

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Among the deeds of Fluvanna lands recorded by the county clerk this week was the sale of 360 acres near Nahor to Edward O. McCue, Charlottesville attorney and member of the House of Delegates. He will begin at an early date erection of a dam and mill on the old Bragg mill site, which contains 60 acres.

Mr. McCue also bought the additional 300 acres of the "Gentleman Jim" Harlow tract which adjoins the Bragg property. After the dam is completed he will stock the pond with fish.

WOO THE STORK

HAUNTED by the spectre of war . . . shivering with apprehension because Russia and Japan are swelling their populations at the rate of thousands of babies each day, Italy and Germany have harnessed the stork . . . and are trying to make him work overtime!

Germany in particular has been suffering from an anti-cradle movement. Marriages have decreased . . and the birth rate has been dropping like mercury in a winter thermometer. And so Handsome Adolf, ignoring the catcalls of critics who point out that he himself is a bachelor, is determined to promote 300,000 weddings within the year.

Beyond the Alps, Il Duce is no less ambitious. "Italy must begin the second half of this century with 60,000,000 people!" he thunders. To accomplish this Fascist storks will have to double their production. An impossible task? Mussolini loves to tackle the impossible.

Already both countries are groaning under a population they can barely support. If they expand further, the result is inevitable. They will burst their bonds, and overflow into territory to be won only by force.

In the Feature Section of tomorrow's Post, Osgood Nichols presents a revealing story of this movement whose sinister significance bodes ill for the future of the world. It is the story of a heartless race to produce cannon fodder and flesh for the machine guns of tomorrow.

Miss Davies' 'Dressing-Room' Tours Streets to Make Hollywood Holiday

Trek Is Begun That Will Weld New Affiliation

Cosmopolitan Star Shifts; Local Actor Acclaimed; Notes on Theater.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is Mr. Leicester Wagner, United Press' agile observer of the Hollywood scene, who takes the trouble to remind me by wire that when Marion Davies became a star on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, Cosmopolitan Productions built her a 14-room "dressing room," costing in the neighborhood of $100,000, which is by way of being quite a parcel of anyone's do-re-mi!

"Suppose," said some bright chap, "Miss Davies leaves this lot some time. How will we move this house?"

So the house, says Mr. Wagner, was built in three sections and bolted together, against the eventuation of what now actually has happened.

Marion Davies moves over onto the Warner lot, come January 1, and already her bungalow is being moved through the streets of Culver City, Los Angeles County, Los Angeles City and Hollywood to Burbank.

All moving, it seems, must be done out yonder after 11 o'clock at night.

A Sight to See!

It is reputedly quite a sight to see that famous house of Davies speeding down the avenues and boulevards of the film capital with a working crew out ahead seeing to it that no harm comes to the wires that have to be hoisted over the "dressing room's" ridgepole—telegraph, telephone, trolley and whatnot.

As has been intimated here before, one of the alleged reasons that Miss Davies, after all these years, is deserting M-G-M and casting her lot on the Warner lot, as you might say, is that all of the better stellar assignments were being given to Norma Shearer. "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" is supposed to have precipitated the break and "Marie Antoinette' added to the volume of Miss Davies' dissatisfaction.

Miss Shearer, it has been more or less generally bruited about, was to have played the title role in "Marie Antoinette" added to the rumored at the moment, that something that would interest Mr. Winchell will definitely defer the production of this film with Miss Shearer as star.

Marion's First at Warner's.

So what would be your guess as to the first picture for Miss Davies at Warners? Quite right. Of course. Nothing other than "Marie Antoinette"—and Jack L. Warner, in charge of West Coast production for the Freres Warner, will personally supervise the making of the fillum.

Already the Warner boys have announced that construction will begin immediately on four new sound stages and buildings necessary to house the Davies unit. The sound stages will set the lads back, as we say in the rear room, to the tune of something more or less remotely approximating $400,000. Employment will be afforded in the neighborhood of 2,000 persons while the job is going on, a period roughly estimated at three or four months.

All right, you Blue Eagle, this is the place to whistle—or whatever it is you do in moments of exultation.

Tomorrow at 1:30 p. m., George M. Cohan, star of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness," at the National Theater, out of regard for Manager Stephen E. Cochran and admiration for his courage in attempting to perpetuate the living theater by conducting the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts and the National Theater Players each spring and summer, will address the students of the academy in its spacious quarters at Connecticut avenue and K street. The interest of so distinguished a gentleman of the theater as Mr. Cohan should prove a great inspiration to those who aspire to trail along in his wake as torchbearers of the theater's noble traditions.

"Local Boy Makes Good!"

Speaking of George M. Cohan and "Ah, Wilderness," as most of us have been, incessantly, since last Monday night, more or less obscured by the flurry of tributes that have accrued to the star and the play is a fact of prime interest to Washington.

I mean to say that, practically unheralded and unsung, a native-born Washingtonian is appearing in the piece with fine credit to himself. The part is not too big, but it is essential to the play's motivation and it is done with skill.

That would be the bartender, in the scene in which Richard Miller is tempted by the "painted woman," so well played by Ruth Holden. The role is played by Lawrence M. Hurdle, or "Jack" Hurdle as he is better known to his intimates, a graduate of McKinley Tech High School, who, for a time, served as a teller in Bob Fleming's financial bulwark known, colloquially, as the Riggs National Bank. Mr. Hurdle's stint behind the austere grills of the counting house endured for something like three years.

Surrenders to Stage.

The urge of the theater, however, was a little too strong. When he was proffered a place in the wild Ted Healy's "The Gang's All Here," he snapped at it, as if it had been a piece of toast, and from there, by one of those moderate processes of Thespic development, gradually gravitated to the Theater Guild. With this splendid organization he has appeared in "He," "The Pure in Heart," "They Shall Not Die" and "Ah, Wilderness."

His urge, however, is on the side of creative effort in the theater—authorship, direction, creation of mood, scene and tempo.

It is doubtful if he could find very much better auspices under which to foster this ambition than to be associated with the American theater's foremost actor in a play by America's ace dramatist.

"Ladies of the Jury," the first play of the Washington Drama Guild season, will be given in the Wardman Park Theater on the evening of November 26 and 27, instead of November 22 and 23, as originally announced. The considerable cast is headed by Grace Peters Johnson, who will be seen in the role created by the late Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske. Harold Weinberger, who directed "Welcome to His Excellency" and "The Tavern" for the Roadside Theater last summer, also is holding the directorial reins over this production. Edith I. Allen, also remembered for her excellent designer-technician contributions to the Roadside group, is designing the sets for "Ladies of the Jury."

"Ali Baba" Again.

Dancing slave girls and bold, bad robbers will infest the courtyards and caves "in a certain town in Persia," when the Arabian Nights tale of "Ali Baba, or the Cave of the Forty Thieves" is presented tonight and tomorrow afternoon in Central High School auditorium, under the auspices of the Community Center Department, by Washington's Community Players.

With Lisa Gardiner in the fascinating feminine role of the "favorite" Morgiana, there also will be the singing slave, played by Christine Irish, and a Lisa Gardiner dancing ensemble.

"Ali Baba," incidentally, was the original World's Fair attraction at the Chicago Opera House, in Chicago, in 1893, with Eddie Foy, Jessie Bartlett Davis, Clara Belle Jerome, Arthur Dunn and others of note in the cast.

Bess Schreiner's production may not quite measure up to that one, but it will come close!

On a basis of international appraisal, Washington's estimate of the worth of "One Night of Love," starring Grace Moore, seems to have been wholly correct. South America reported, "undoubtedly the season's outstanding success;" from Columbia Pictures' Mexican branch manager came the report that the picture was "starting third week and breaking all records," while J. L. McCurdy reported from Australia that it was the "greatest in Australia's history."

Although "One Night of Love" concluded a record downtown run at the Metropolitan last night, it still is not lost to the Capital's picture addicts. Beginning Sunday, it will be shown for four consecutive days at the Tivoli Theater, Fourteenth street and Park road northwest. That, needless to say, would be a Warner house, founded, however, by Crandall.

Honest Confession Note.

This was supposed to have been a wholly original and novel column, as such things go these days.

It was supposed not to have mentioned George M. Cohan.

That, at least, would be different!

On Warner Screens in New Films

Lee Tracy, the smiling young man with the handful of cigarette, above at left, is said to have one of the most congenial roles ever assigned to him in pictures in Damon Runyon's "The Lemon Drop Kid," opening today as chief feature of the bill at the Metropolitan. Helen Mack, who appeared with him in "You Belong to Me," again has the feminine lead. At right above is Barbara Stanwyck, star of "A Lost Lady," the screen feature opening today at the Earle, with Waring's Pennsylvanians on the stage.

Straight From the Studios

A Jungle Picture Will Be Studio-Made in Color; Joan Blondell and Guy Kibbee Teamed Again; Intimate Close-Ups of Filmdom.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Nov. 15.—"Green Mansions" probably will be Merian C. Cooper's first effort for Pioneer Pictures, and will give him fulfillment of his ambition of seven years standing to reproduce a picture of jungle life on the screen with color photography.

JOAN BLONDELL.

The jungle sequences doubtless will be photographed on enclosed stages and the jungle will take the form of sets, because the lighting can be better controlled, which is the all-important thing in color filmization.

"Green Mansions" is the quasi-Nature study in novel form, written by William H. Hudson, and embodies many highly pictorial and dramatic happenings, chief of which is the death of the heroine in fire.

Joan's Return Planned.

"Social Pirates" looms likely as the story for Joan Blondell's return to the screen, in which case she probably will appear opposite Guy Kibbee. He has just returned from a personal appearance tour and goes into "While the Patient Sleeps" at once, with Aline MacMahon opposite in the feminine lead.

This will be followed by "Social Pirate," which concerns a Midwestern couple, trying to crash society by engaging an attractive waitress to pose as their daughter.

Kibbee and Miss Blondell have played in "Havana Widows," "Convention City," "Footlight Parade" and their last together, "Dames."

"Father Goose," Meaning Mr. Sennett.

Who will produce "Father Goose," the Gene Fowler story of Mack Sennett? The producers are interested in this real-life sketch of the famous comedy producer. However, it is understood that Sennett himself will have something to say about disposal of the rights. Who knows? He might even produce it himself. Rumors are that Twentieth Century has been dickering for the story.

Glenda Reports Again.

Glenda Farrell is becoming quite experienced as a film newspaperwoman, which lends credence to a report that she will carry the lead in "Women Are Bum Newspapermen," title subject to change without notice. She appeared in such a role in "Hi, Nellie," with Paul Muni. Her last picture was "Kansas City Princess" and she is now in "Golddiggers of 1935."

Film Pageant In Review.

Following a contest, Photoplay Magazine names the following as winning candidates for roles in "Anthony Adverse:" Leslie Howard in the totle role; Edward G. Robinson, as Napoleon; Bette Davis as Angela; Kay Francis, as Dolores; George Brent, as Vincent Nolte; Warren William, as Brother Francis; Ann Dvorak, as the African girl; Guy Kibbee, as John Bonnyfeather.

Option on Glen Boles' services has been taken up by Warners. He appears in "Flirtation Walk."

"Sons of Steel" will have a cast including Polly Ann Young, Charles Starrett, William Bakewell, as leads, with Holmes Herbert, Aileen Pringle, Florence Roberts, Barbara Bedford, Walter Walker, Edgar Norton and others.

port that the picture was "starting third week and breaking all records," while J. L. McCurdy reported from Australia that it was the "greatest in Australia's history."

The hydra, or fresh water polyp, is far down on the scale of animal life, being one of the simplest forms of multi-celled animals. It grows to be about a quarter of an inch long and about as big around as the lead in an automatic pencil. It has a single disk-shaped foot by which it clings to sticks or stones, and at the other end of its elongated body there is a cluster of tentacles at the center of which is the mouth.

The hydra has the strange power to live and grow when it has been cut into several pieces, each piece developing into a new and complete hydra. It multiplies in three different manners, by division as cited above, or by the budding process, or from simple eggs. In budding, a new hydra grows out from the parent like a branch on a tree.

To demonstrate the hydra's hardiness and its ability to grow new organs, Abraham Trembley, Swiss naturalist of more than 100 years ago, turned one of the tiny animals inside out. The hydra kept right on eating and living, utilizing a new set of digestive organs which it grew in its new inside.

Beginning when he was 19 years old, David D. Cohee, late Boone County, Indiana, resident, kept a day-by-day record of his life and activities, of the weather, and of incidents in the lives of his friends. When he died at 80 years he had 62 volumes of the diary, each with a year in it. The strange diary has proven to be a valuable history of Cohee and his friends, and has been consulted several times by attorneys seeking data on forgotten family history half a century old.

DinnerDance Is Given for Debutantes

Annual Party Colorful Scene, With Over 100 Present.

Out-of-Town Guests Are Present at National Country Club.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Debutante Dinner Dance, given last night at the National Woman's Country Club, was one of the outstanding festivities of the season. This party, which has become a tradition in Washington, was started six years ago by a committee of six prominent women who were presenting their daughters or nieces to society that season.

They were Mme. Claudel, wife of the French Ambassador of that time, who is now in Brussels, where M. Claudel is French Ambassador to Belgium; Princess de Ligne, wife of the one-time Belgian Ambassador; Mrs. Henry S. Cilton, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, who now is Lady Chilton, chatelaine of the British Embassy in Santiago, Chile; Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, who was presenting Miss Dor Catalani, niece of Signor Giuseppe Catalani, of the Italian Embassy; Mrs. James Mandeville Carlisle, whose daughter, the former Miss Kate Carlisle, is now Princess Leonide Ourusoff, and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, whose niece, Miss Alice de Peyster, of New York, was a debutante of that season.

As a dinner dance the first party was small and of necessity limited, but it was so successful that it has been held annually since then. For the last four years the place has been the National Woman's Country Club, that red brick, rambling house in Bradley Hills where so many delightful parties have been given.

Procedure Is Outlined.

Three or four mothers of debutantes are elected to the committee each year, and an equal number of mothers from the previous two years are retained. The committee then selects from 15 to 20 debutantes to be invited with their escorts, and the same number of girls who have been members of the dinner dance for the past two years. Ten debutantes from New York, six from Philadelphia, six from Baltimore, six from nearby Virginia and other parts of the South are invited.

As many of the girls have two escorts, this makes a dinner of more than 100 guests, which is the capacity of the club. Out-of-town women are sometimes elected to the committee, as in the case of Mrs. Richard Crane, of Richmond; Mrs. F. Ashton de Peyster, of New York; Mrs. William L. Elkins, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Cecil Barrett, the former Miss Gadys Gittings, of Baltimore.

This year's committee consists of Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Minister of Austria, who was a member five years ago when her eldest daughter, Miss Loranda Prochnik, now Mrs. Francis LeCompte Spalding, was a debutante; Mrs. John Washington Davidge, daughter of the former Secretary of War, Mr. Weeks; Mrs. James Clement Dunn, whose daughter, Miss Marianna Dunn, is the State Department debutante of this season; Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., wife of Representative Fish, whose daughter was presented two years ago; Mrs. John Philip Hill, whose daughter, Miss Susanne Hill, was a debutante last year, and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, who again is chairman of the committee.

Other Members Listed.

The six members whose daughters are debutantes this season, besides Mme. Prochnik, Mrs. Davidge and Mrs. Dunn, are Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, wife of the United States Ambassador to Italy; Mrs. Henry McHarg, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who also has served previously on the committee; Mrs. George S. Patton and Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton.

In the receiving line last night were Mrs. Tuckerman, Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Davidge. Dinner was served at several large tables, which were decorated with autumn-colored chrysanthemums. The large open fires gave a glow to the low-ceilinged, chintz-hung rooms, and the dancing lasted far into the morning. Among the out-of-town debutantes who attended were Miss Joanna Biddle and Miss Helen Tyson, who were sponsored by Mrs. James Francis Sullivan; Miss Emily Lewis Custis Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil M. Stevens, and Miss Mamie Dickson, daughter of Mrs. Arigo Righi, of New York, and Miss Betsie Sothoron, of Baltimore.

Among the Washington girls who made up the gay and colorful gathering were Miss Valerie Prochnik, Miss Christine Long, Miss Louise Alexander, Miss Martha Davidge, Miss Gladys Broz, Miss Christine Ekengren, Miss Gertrude Faust, Miss Suzanne Hill, Miss Caroline Johnson, Miss Emily Maddox, Miss Patricia Mencia, of Cuba, who is making her home in the Capital; Miss Mary McDowell, Miss Estherbelle McHarg, Miss Louise Myers, Miss Ruth Ellen Payton, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, Miss Helen Rodgers, Miss Elizabeth Rowan, Miss Diana Rowland, Miss Carlina Sheridan, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Miss Dorothea Sowers, Miss Ruth Sowers, Miss Marian Shouse, Miss Ruth Tuckerman and Miss Evelyn Walker.

The ten members of the committee and about 60 young men completed the dinner party. A few additional guests arrived later for the dance.

Farewell Fete Slated Monday For Dr. Wilmer

Dinner in Baltimore to Honor Retiring Head of Hopkins Institute.

Dr. William Holland Wilmer, for many years prominent in Capital society in addition to his eminence in his profession, will be given a farewell dinner Monday evening by the boards of trustees of Johns Hopkins Hospital and Johns Hopkins University, in the great hall of the Welch Medical Library in Baltimore.

Dr. Wilmer retired recently as director of the Wilmer Ophthalmological Institute and as ophthalmologist-in-chief of Johns Hopkins Hospital, in which position he has served for a number of years, giving up his residence in Washington after establishment of the Wilmer Institute. The institute was founded in 1925 through gifts of friends and former patients of Dr. Wilmer.

The former Secretary of War, Mr. Newton D. Baker, a trustee of Johns Hopkins University, will be toastmaster. Among the speakers will be Dr. George Edmund de Schweinitz, of Philadelphia. Dr. Henry Barton Jacobs, a trustee of Johns Hopkins Hospital, is chairman of the committee on arrangements, and is being assisted by Dr. J. Hall Pleasants and Mr. Morris Whitridge, trustees of the hospital, and Dr. Thomas R. Brown, trustee of the university.

Among those who will be at the speakers' table will be Mrs. Henry Breckinridge and Mr. Herbert L. Satterlee, trustees of the Wilmer Institute.

Gamut of Christmas Gifts for All Types of Men Run in These Colorful Suggestions

The Selection Of Proper Ones Is Big Problem

Classify Recipients by Habit or Hobby and Task Will Be Easier.

By M. A. Weiss.

THESE ARE the evenings when more pencil tops are bitten through the rubber than ever before. We never realize how many friends and relatives we have until the virus of Christmas giving penetrates our systems. We love to give . . . but figuring out the proper gift is another matter.

A process of elimination may suggest the right gift for the right person. Here's how it works. Classify each prospective recipient by habit or hobby.

For the Chap Who's on the Go.

A graflex camera in a compact case. A kitbag of pigskin with airplain markings. A traveling game kit of cards, bridge score, chips, chess and checkerboard combination that folds into a morocco case and slips easily into a pocket. The new metal pocket stove that operates on a teaspoonful of water (chemical element supplies heat). Traveling slippers and pajamas in flexible leather case.

A fitted bag containing razors, traveling clock, mirror, soap, nail-clippers and file, brushes and comb, and toilet accessories. A tobacco pouch that holds a pipe as well, made of pigskin and operated on a slide fastener. A flat thermos flask that holds over a pint and slips into the hip picket easily. This is covered with pigskin.

The Hard-Working Chap.

Enter the athlete. String gloves with telemark designs, lined with wool, are always welcome. Binoculars in a leather case with pocket for notebook and pencil does for the football fan as well as all other lovers of spectator sports. The ball-bearing cigarette case eliminates the need of removing gloves for a smoke. If he rides, a new crop is always welcome. A cable stitch sweater will appeal to this chap, as will the new leather polo shirt lined with wool Tartan.

If He Owns a Car.

He'll like the new wool blanket that has a slide fastener in the center and can be used as a poncho at football games or rumble seat. String gloves with leather palms, matching sox and reefer make a swell gift for this chap. A shell stitch cardigan jacket that he can wear under his coat will be greatly appreciated, and a half dozen pairs of ski-sox (wool, of course, . . . to slip over his regular sox) will just drive him to a merry holiday. Give him things that speed him on his way.

For the Collegiate.

Shirts with button-down collars in soft flannels, gay in ground and striped or checked or plaided. If you want to splurge, a greatcoat of tweed with reversible whipcord shell lining. Madder print English square handkerchiefs; the more color the better. Knitted ties with diagonal stripings. Braces and garter sets in his club colors. Scarfs . . . wooly and soft with plenty of color and long enough to be tied Ascot fashion. A lighter with his university or fraternity insignia. A good pipe . . . a couple of good pipes. Dress jewelry in semiprecious stones. Oxblood or chocolate pig gloves, slip-on model.

For Middle-Aged Man.

A lounge robe of necktie silk, a host coat that replaces his worn-out and outmoded smoking jacket. Leather slippers of morocco or snakeskin with leather soles and heels. Dickey bosom shirts, in subdued stripings. Soft pleated pastel shirts. Macclesfield and Spittalsfield ties on dark grounds. A pearl stickpin. Sheer cambric handkerchiefs, with his own initial. Adjustable belts and braces. Silk hose with miniature argyle patterns . . . and his favorite smokes or tipple.

For The Party-Goer.

Things that are glamorous appeal to this chap. A key chain and flameless lighter in white gold, silver or chrome is welcome; one set has black enamel with a lozenge for initials. The suspender-back waistcoat and the French (adjustable) tab-back shirt is right down his alley. Make sure you know his size. A streamlined collapsible enough of them.

opera hat, or perhaps a cigar or cigarette case of streamline construction. A kit of six formal ties in a leather case (three black and three white) will find favor and usage. Semi-precious stone-dress jewelry hit the right spot.

An artificial boutonniere, resembling either a maroon carnation or a blue cornflower (get him both), will bowl him over. They can't be told from the real flower unless one fingers them . . . and they last indefinitely. Full-fashioned silk hose, with gem-tone embroidered clocks and hand-rolled cambric handkerchiefs, will get you many silent thanks during the year. A knitted silk reefer or canary silk scraf, extra long, with his initials comes in nicely. He's in the limelight, so give him things that will enhance his personal appearance, and are in keeping with sophisticated smartness.

The Chap in His Teens.

He's a man, you know, even though you think of him as a boy. His reticence may annoy and make him a problem to you, but he's merely creating the masculine impression. Since he'll start going to parties of a formal nature, get him the shawl collar, double-breasted dinner jacket with high rise English trousers.

Flannel slacks and side-vented Wales check jacket, with bellows pockets and leather buttons, will make him tops at his prep school. Tattersal weskits, corduroy weskits, striped braces and ties . . . ties . . . ties . . . knitted ties, regimental and college striped repps, long-pointed striped or India madras bow ties—he can never get

(1) French tab bulgeless dress shirt adjustable in the back; (2), backless dress waistcoat to match shirt (this may be obtained in suspender back model); (3), cable stitch crew neck sweater (like Bill Tilden always wears); (4), collapsible silk opera hat, new stream-lined model; (5), horizontal stripe, dickey bosom shirt, with solid color chambray body, British stripe tab collar shirt, corded flannel, button down collar shirts; (6), Fair Isle hand loomed wool socks with peasant design; (7), polo coat dressing gown of heavy flannel; (8), lounge suit of necktie silk with sleeping jacket to match; (9), buck gloves . . . light buff if he wears darkish coats, dark chocolate if he wears light coats.

Double Duty Coat Popular At Princeton

Undergraduates Are Using Colored Towels for Mufflers.

PRINCETON, N. J.—The eve of one of the oldest football and style classics in America brings to mind the airmail pilot whom nothing can stay from his appointed rounds—neither wind nor hail, snow nor sleet. Your died-in-the-wool football fan doesn't let the elements damped his ardor either. However, with inner and outer fortification he takes his spectator sport in comfort. Proper clothing is his paramount consideration, and this beautiful, cloistered town presents many new undergraduate costumes and habits that are bound to influence the university world.

From Gommy's to the Ivy Club, better dressed undergraduates and the younger alumni have given outstanding preference to the reversible coat. This coat is not exactly new (having first been seen several years ago in civilian dress, a mode adopted from air pilots coats,) but has never attained the popularity that makes a style a fashion. It seems definitely in . . . especially for football wear. This garment has one side of tweed and the other of water repellant fabric, generally gabardine. The tweed shells were mostly of brown or covert color and the gabardines, greenish or light tan. Variations of pattern include checks, plaids, herringbones and overplaids. Just as the raccoon coat of a generation ago marked the varsity football fan, so does this coat belong to today's.

Tweed Coat With Fabric Lining.

Second in importance is the tweed or camel's hair coat with detachable lining of fabric or fur. This inner lining (sometimes checked or plaid) has an all around slide fastener attachment that converts the garment into an overcoat or topcoat in a fraction of a minute. It is ideal for driving as well as dress and sports wear. The big coat of the moment in this model is the fly-front, military collar style, with the double breasted, raglan sleeve, belted model following on its heels.

Terry cloth towels draped muffler fashion about the necks of undergraduates are a striking note. These are colorful, and I have been told, first became a fad at the Columbia-Yale game, which was played in the wettest of wet weather. The towel-muffler was used to keep water from dripping down necks and to wipe faces and hands. The surprising warmth immediately led to repeated use. This is no news to the tennis player and other active sportsmen who have for years done the same thing for the same ends. We expect to see enterprising merchants pattern towels after terry mufflers . . . and again in creeps the "double duty" influence.

String gloves are big here. In place of Telemarken designs, one sees back darts and wrist markings of contrasting colors. Some wore knitted hose to match gloves and a muffler of the same type.

Snap-Brim Hat in Vogue.

The brown snap-brim, bound edge hat is style in vogue, with this difference. The "V" shape of the crown is worn higher and sharper than of yore and the back is more squarish and tapering. A few porkpies were in evidence. Brown buck shoes, with leather soles and rubber heels are a part of campus dress. The Jai Alai type shoe of brown grain with crepe sole is a feature.

The tables tab collar in British stripings, worn pinned and the button down collar oxford and flannel shirt in suit fabric, colors and patterns on a diminutive scale are new notes.

It's color contrast here, and not harmony, that makes for an unusual and pleasant ensemble, and from all indications we can look for more and more color in undergraduate styles for 1935. More of this after the game. M. A. W.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion without being foppish is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette governing conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the what, when and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

About Formal Accessories.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: Where can I get a list of proper accessories for formal occasions? Do you publish one?

P. V. L.

• • • •

SIR: Send a self-addressed stamped envelope and I will be happy to mail you a copy.

Heirloom Studs Correct.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: I have a set of ruby studs and vest buttons that were my grandfather's. I notice you advocate semiprecious stones for evening wear. Would these be correct?

M. B.

• • • •

SIR: If they're not too ornate in gold trim, the set you mention should be both correct and smart.

Truth About Creases.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: I have been told that theatrical folk have creases sewn into their trousers. Is this proper . . . since it seems to eliminate the need for constant pressing?

H. L. T.

• • • •

SIR: I would not advise it. The natural give of wool fabric and its draping qualities ruined, you'll look like you've saddle bags at your knees after a few months.

In the dining room, Mrs. Stanley J. Richardson, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. S. M. Garwood and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribbey will preside at the tea table.

Beta Sigma Omicron Alumnae of Washington will hold its monthly meeting at 8 p. m. Monday, with Mrs. Robert S. Campbell as hostess. Mrs. R. M. DeShaze will preside.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Woman Volunteers Home and Services in Behalf of "Mothers, Inc."

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have a nice home and am willing to open a headquarters for "Mothers, Inc." I am willing with cooperation to advertise such a place and hold it as an an employment office right here until it pays. Then we might open a headquarters some where else.

• • • •

My telephone is North 8508-J, and those interested may call me and we can talk it over. I am interested in the lonely and love to entertain. I am a septuagenarian, but young and active for my years. I have been a nurse, holding highest references, but now live with my son and his wife.

• • • •

All set to hear from those who mean business about organizing "Mothers, Inc.," I am,

MRS. HARRISON.

• • • • •

DEAR MRS. HARRISON: If the many letters I have had from readers endorsing "Ruth's" suggestion of a "Mothers, Inc.," were to be taken literally, you should find ready support, both moral and financial, in launching the project. I hope it may prove an economic and social success for all concerned. M. H.

Here's A Thought!

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been thinking of the problem of the older woman who has time on her hands and would be glad to do such social work as visiting the home for the blind and other institutions, if only she could afford to.

• • • •

On the other hand, there are many women financially able to do this, who, either because of home duties, physical disability, or inaptitude for the work, fail to render this valuable and much needed service.

• • • •

I have wondered if you might perhaps be able to bring these two classes of women together. If so, a mighty work might be accomplished. WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING: My contribution toward bringing these two hypothetical classes of women together is necessarily limited to printing your letter in this column, and hoping that it may attract the eye of some person or persons with sufficient time, initiative, financial means and interest in the suggestion to investigate its possibilities and perhaps develop them. And so much I most willingly do. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Farm Women Awakening to Health Value

Mrs. C. Nelson Beck Trying to Have Yearly Clinics Set Up for Them.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE TWO most important things to farm women today are flower gardens and a consciousness of the value of health. Most of them have the former. Through the efforts of Mrs. C. Nelson Beck rural housewives, in Virginia at least, are awakening to the latter.

For 20 years Mrs. Beck has lived close to the soil in Albemarle County. In that time she has learned flowers are a safety valve to women weighted down with chores from dawn to dark. She also has learned that farm housewives impair their health through overwork and reluctance to call in doctors.

"You see, we farm women have so little money to spend, and doctors charge so much when they are called to the country," Mrs. Beck said yesterday.

She had come to Washington to take part in the fifteenth annual conference of the American Country Life Association. With Miss Grace Frysinger, head of the Department of Agriculture's Extension Service, and Miss Julia Merrill, of the American Library Association, she planned the program for the conference of farm women yesterday in the Department of Agriculture's auditorium.

Wants Medical Clinics.

Because farm women usually work beyond their strength, and because few of them can afford physicians' services, Mrs. Beck hopes clinics will be established so that every rural housewife can have a yearly physical examination for a dollar.

"I tried to get the Virginia State Medical Association to help in establishing clinics all over our State but I didn't have much success," Mrs. Beck said. "Finally the women in Campbell County, with the help of the doctors there, established their own little clinic. But I haven't given up the State-wide idea. And some day I hope it will be Nation-wide. I'm convinced those yearly examinations would curb cancer, tuberculosis, and other diseases now taking toll among overworked farm woman."

As for cutting down the amount of work done by rural housewives—Mrs. Beck doesn't see any hope of that.

Reveals Poverty on Farms.

"You people in town had a depression in 1929. Our depression began in 1922. We've been without money for so long we've had to make over clothes and then make them over again. We've had to can enough from our own gardens and orchards to feed our families through the entire winter. We've simply had to work early and late in order to exist. And yet I don't think anybody has ever heard us complain. Maybe it's because we haven't had time to feel sorry for ourselves. But I think the real reason is we know in our hearts we are fortunate, no matter how close we have to trim the corners.

"I don't know of a single farm woman who wants to move to town. Life is easier in town, of course. But it's so cramped. In the country we're surrounded with beauty. Why, even a wood-pile is beautiful in the moonlight. And did you ever see the sun coming up over a field white with frost? Oh, I tell you, we who live in the country are lucky no matter how hard we have to work."

Mrs Beck stopped suddenly. She seemed a little embarrassed to think she had given full expression to her love for the land. Dressed in a smart plaid frock and a modish brown hat, turned up on one side to reveal lively brown eyes and a firm, youthful skin, she looked more like a member of the Friday Evening Bridge Club than a farm woman who raises chickens and vegetables, and does all the other chores allotted to rural housewives.

"Except milking," laughed Mrs. Beck, "I've never milked a cow. My husband runs a dairy and he has milking machines. And I'd never had a chance to learn before I moved to the dairy farm because I'd grown up in town—in Charlottesville."

Flowers Called Important.

She has spent her entire life in Albermarle County and can't imagine ever wanting to leave it.

"About flowers," she continued. "They're terribly important to farm women. A flower garden is our one extravagance; our only gesture toward the frivolous. Everything else we do; everything else we raise, is to be eaten or sold. The flowers are for pure beauty. That's why every mountain cabin has a row of scraggly sunflowers and why farm women, no matter how much else they have to do, will take time and trouble to raise marigolds and gladioli and dahlias."

Last year Mrs. Beck was president of the Virginia Homemakers Association, which has a membership of 14,000. She urged the women to become interested in politics, economics and education.

Rural Forum Attracts 300 Farm Women

DRESSED as fashionably as their city cousins, approximately 300 farm women from 23 States are in Washington today attending the fifteenth annual National Rural Forum of the American Country Life Association.

Yesterday the women held a conference of their own to discuss factors essential for successful rural home and community life. Sessions were held in the auditorium of the South Building, Department of Agriculture.

The indifference of rural people to fine things within their reach was decried by Mrs. Clifton Johnson, of Hadley, Mass.

Extols Rural Virtues.

Evidently Mrs. Johnson's own family is fully aware of the blessings of the countryside. She declared:

"My oldest son says people don't appreciate the full joy of being able to sit on their own doorsteps and have nobody looking at them. My mother mentions the comfort of being able to walk about the buildings and in the garden without being in the public eye. I appreciate the assistance of the mountains and the river in bringing up my family of five—something that the wealthy city people have to pay considerable money for."

Rural Home Held Ideal.

"Since prohibition has been discarded and liquor dispensaries established in cities and towns, I think the children of rural homes are less exposed to the temptation of drink."

The farm appeals to both Mrs. Fred Ward, of Saginaw, Mich., and Mrs. Fred Herrick, of Logansport, Ind., as a place of refuge and steadfastness.

"I believe the rural home is the most stabilizing influence we have during this period we are now going through," Mrs. Herrick said.

Mrs. Ward said:

"Besides being a more complete economic unit, the rural home is a more complete social unit. The interests of the members are more or less identical, while the city home, with its divergence of interests, is being naturally and inevitably torn apart."

The forum will be continued tomorrow and Monday.

Pewter's Century-Long Table Reign Recalled

PEWTER DINNER plates today undoubtedly would be considered an affectation of the quaint. But there was a time in this country when a complete pewter table service signified wealth and an intimacy with fashion. The family who owned the service was automatically pushed up a couple of notches in the social scale above those who were still eating out of wooden trenchers.

The supremacy of pewter in the United States lasted for an entire century—from 1750 to 1850. Paul Revere won fame in the Colonies for making pewter long before he became renowned for his riding ability. Some of his pieces are in the American wing of the Metropolitan Museum.

The most extensive Early American collection is probably the Kerfoot, which is being exhibited at the first annual fine arts exposition at the Forum in Rockefeller Center, New York. The exposition will continue until December 1.

At almost the same time pewter was replacing wooden tableware in this country, china was succeeding pewter in Europe. Long before the Revolution the clipper ships of New England were rapidly reducing the gap in wealth between us and the Old World so that pewter had scarcely come into power in the Colonies before it was vanquished by china. Pewter, however, managed to carry on a more or less successful guerrilla warfare in both America and England until about 1850. Then it disappeared.

The early makers concerned themselves mainly with tableware, and plates naturally were of foremost importance. Wood, pewter, china—these three have been the successive rulers of the tableware world. Each has won its spurs as a "frill" material; that is, a material used to develop platters, bowls and salt cellars. Each has fought its way to complete command, and each, when its triumph was won and its time came to rule, has had the scepter handed to it on a dinner plate.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

CHILDREN may be the bond that makes a marriage happy, but they can go a long way toward ruining the dinner table tete-a-tete that helps to preserve romance. For, what woman can listen with rapt attention to her husband's story of the business coup he put over that day while she has one eye on little Johnny, spilling his soup, dunking his bread in his cocoa, or eating his mashed potatoes from his fingers?

Giving very small children their supper alone, before father arrives home from the office, has many advantages. They eat simple gelatin happily, without an envious eye on the pie their elders are enjoying. Their mother can give her whole attention to their table manners and, consequently, she does a better job of it than if her interest is divided between that task and trying to carry on a conversation at the same time. And the peace that descends on the cozy table set for two, when the children's supper is out of the way, is positively blissful.

The arrangement is not as difficult as it seems. By setting up a little table in the kitchen, you can keep one eye on the potatoes boiling on the stove while you teach a child how to hold his fork properly, to pour his milk carefully without spilling, and the other niceties of table deportment. The reward for progress is to sit at the table with the grown folks occasionally; and by the time he is around six, he can manage so well that it is a pleasure, rather than an ordeal, to have him at the dinner table.

Tuesday: Thanksgiving Party.

For personal advice on child management, write Alice Fox Pitts, in care of The Washington Post.

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. Is extraordinary preferably pronounced with five syllables or six?
2. Where is the accent in automobile?
3. Is foyer properly called FOI-yer?

Answers Here.

1. It is preferably pronounced with five—eks-TROR-din-ay-ry.
2. Preferably on the third syllable. o-to-MO-bil.
3. No. fwa-YA (the last "a" is as in "ate").

This handsome teapot, ladle, coffee pot and quart mug are among the early American pewter pieces in the celebrated Kerfoot collection, now on exhibition in New York. The pieces illustrated were made by J. Danforth and are typical of the century from 1750 to 1850, when pewter was as important in the American household as china is today.

Lady Mendl's Book Snubs Fancy Dishes

Generous Portions of Simple Food Advocated.

HOSTESSES who go into a dither thinking up fancy menus with many courses and exotic dishes are on the wrong track, according to no less an authority than Lady Mendl, formerly Elsie de Wolfe.

"The perfect meal is the short meal."

"Good taste in food is the reverse of lavish."

"It is the humble dish one comes back to with gusto."

These excerpts are from the De Wolfe food philosophy as expounded in Lady Mendl's new book. Among the recommended dishes are ragout, grilled sole, roast chicken and risotto, because "each tastes like what it is."

Lady Mendl advocates generous portions of simple food, a short time at table and consideration for people who have learned to eat wisely and well. She also thinks each guest is entitled to a menu card so he'll know what food is coming.

New Slippers End 'Groping' Discomforts

Sturdy Sole With Couple of Straps Intended for Chilly Morns.

By Katherine Smith.

(During the absence of Miss Ruth Anne Davis, her column is being written by Katherine Smith.)

IS there anything colder than a tiled floor? Is there anything more difficult than trying to get into your bedroom slippers just after you get up in the morning? And during that awful moment while you're groping for the tooth paste, and your toes are curling on the cold bathroom floor, haven't you wished you could find a slipper that was easy to get into, and comfortable to "slop" around in?

You needn't hunt any more. There's a new bedroom slipper with a flat sturdy sole, no heel, with a couple of straw straps that hold it on the foot. The straps are in brown and cream, blue, red, or green and cream. The price is only 25 cents.

These slippers are intended for the sole purpose of covering that chilly distance from bed to dresser, bathroom to closet, when you're too sleepy to try to get your feet into bigger ones.

Their very simplicity makes them easy to put on, their flatness makes them more than comfortable for housewear.

Budget Box Is Good Buy.

Here's a very good buy in the beauty preparation line. It's a budget box, put out by a well-known beautician, and includes rouge, powder and lipstick (each singly would cost a dollar), a light skin tonic, a face cream and a dry cleanser to be used like a powdered soap. The entire box, attractively done up, is only $3.50. The box was designed particularly for college girls, and takes up little room in a suitcase.

Even if you're no longer a college girl, you'll want to take advantage of this splendid buy. You'll not be sorry.

Shoe Horns Two Feet Long.

Is it a problem to put on your shoes? Rather, is the leaning over to reach them difficult? One of these long shoe horns would save you lots of discomfort. They are nearly two feet long, and come in several colors.

Brandy Inhaler for Flowers.

One of the loveliest flower vases we've seen in a long time is the overgrown brandy inhaler—you've seen these bowl-shaped affairs set on a stem. It's of beautifully clear crystal, delicately etched with a simple design. Glass vases are always good, because they can be used with almost any color flowers.

Then there's another one—this time an overgrown water goblet, just like the ones you use on your dinner table. It has slightly turned-out edges, which allow flowers to fall gracefully.

Tiny Candles Nice.

One of the nicest table-ornament ideas is a tiny candle at each place. One store has an assortment of these little candles, all in different shapes. There are apples, the wick serving as a stem; donkeys with wicks coming out of their backs, and Christmas trees that use the flames for stars.

Perhaps the quaintest of the candles are the penguins, looking as peculiar as Disney's own. Touch a flame to the tops of their heads, and your guests will be delighted with their favors.

There are some tall Christmas trees that would be lovely on a mirror plaque in the center of your table.

Here's another nice gadget—a glass holder. It's an unobtrusive thing that clamps on the edge of a card table, three slender metal rods serving to hold the glass in place. As it hangs on the outside of the edge, no space on the table is taken up with glassware. Set of four: 50 cents.

Another holder is for ginger ale or other round bottles. It looks a little like those holders they use in drugstores for your milk-shake glass, but far more stunning. Chromium is the material. The design is smart.

Poppy Inspires Cologne.

A California poppy was the inspiration for a new cologne, not only the inspiration, but the basis for the odor as well. The cologne is made in California, where these lovely flowers are plentiful. The bottles are flat, straight-lined, and decorated with a poppied lable.

Lavender Sachet Offered.

Speaking of scents, there's a little box containing a large sized lavender sachet and six variegated cakes of guest soap. The box is lined in lavender, is oval shaped with two lids that are hinged in the middle, really making two boxes in one.

Afterthought: the box is nice enough to be used for handkerchiefs, or small cosmetics after the contents are used.

Have you seen those gold and topaz costume jewelry pieces? They are bright and glowing, beautifully designed along Florentine lines.

Bracelets, over an inch wide, large long earrings, necklaces made up of linked units, large and small clips are among the selections.

Call Katherine Smith, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Frock Suitable for Home, Comfortable for Work

Pattern No. 525.

EVERY WOMAN needs a crisp little house frock which will be comfortable enough for work and still presentable if she should have unexpected callers. Today's design is just such a dress, with the smart touches which lift it out of the ordinary house-dress class.

That center-front seam below the clever little scalloped closing ends in an inverted pleat, which allows plenty of freedom. The shaped collar and scalloped lapels are in one with the front, and even the sleeves are scalloped. Patch pockets are a nice note. It is designed in sizes 34 to 44. Size 36 requires 3⅜ yards of 35-inch material for the frock; ¾ yard of 35-inch for trimming.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Neuritis.

We are all more or less slaves to fashion. Styles change and we follow blindly. Although last year's coat or gown is eminently serviceable it will not do; the sleeves are too large or too small; the skirt too full or too short. There are fashions in medicine just as there are in clothes. Fortunately medical fashions do not present so many variations nor the intensive kaleidoscopic colorings.

In some quarters neuritis is a fashionable diagnosis and into its lap is dumped by physicians and lay persons alike a large number of conditions attended with pain. Neuritis and rheumatism run a close race as catchalls when we are not quite sure just where the pain comes from. True neuritis is not a common disease, yet it does exist and may be accompanied by important symptoms requiring accurate diagnosis and treatment.

In many instances the cause can be traced to an injury that may be exceedingly slight in character, such as a badly fitting pair of crutches or sleeping on one's arm. Toxins are important and those produced by infections, such as rheumatis fever, influenza, diphtheria, and pneumonia, are not infrequently followed by nerve inflammation. Lead, arsenic and alcohol are among the poisons that cause neuritis. The disease known as beriberi (absence of vitamin B) is characterized by neuritis and paralysis.

The disease may be limited to a single nerve, such as the sciatic, or confined to a bundle of nerves such as those that supply the arm, or there may be inflammation of the spinal nerve roots, causing pain and muscular disturbance in an entire segment of the body.

Most forms of the disease, however, involve mixed nerves, that is, nerves that carry both pain and muscle moving fibers and the disease is then attended by pain or numbness, muscular weakness and muscle wasting or atrophy. The pain is greatly increased on stretching the nerve. In some cases only numbness or constant tingling will be noted; in others the mere touching of the skin over the affected nerve causes excruciating pain. If the disease involves the nerves supplying the muscles of the hand it is often difficult to grasp objects.

Neuritis means inflammation of a nerve, and the remedy is rest. It is sometimes necessary to immobilize or fix the part of the body affected by means of splints, so as to prevent the slightest movement. The more complete the rest the more rapid will be recovery. Heat for the purpose of stimulating blood flow to the affected parts is most useful. Hot water bottles, electric heating pads, and the infrared lamp are excellent means of application. Elimination of toxins is essential. Inasmuch as massage and exercise will increase the pain and prevent healing, this treatment should be employed only after recovery has taken place and for the purpose of restoring wasted muscles. The cause must always be searched for.

Pain in the extremities of elderly persons is usually not true neuritis. It is often due to a slowing down of the circulation and pain is the cry of the muscles for nourishment. As a rule X-rays will show narrowed and hardened arteries, thus explaining the lack of a normal blood supply.

Despite the general misuse of the term neuritis, physicians are alert to the necessity of identifying the exact cause of all manifestations of pain. Whenever pain is associated with extreme tenderness of skin or muscles, or can be traced along the course of a nerve; whenever weakness or loss of muscle tissue follows, we may then say with reasonable certainty that the disease is a true neuritis.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

IF NOVEMBER 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m.

On this November 17 be careful you do not let flattery induce you to do something that later on might be regretted. Regard with suspicion something that may be offered for nothing, and before accepting it be sure there is no catch attached to the proffered gift, unless it is a birthday offering.

Any form of boisterous entertainment is likely to result in altercations. The wise host will discourage it as soon as there is the slightest indication decorum is in danger of being cast to the four winds. Married and engaged couples, and those seeking the primrose path, may avoid accidents by refraining from attempting any hazardous feats in an endeavor to provide amusement or show off.

If a woman, and November 17 is your birthday, you will possibly find the day more enjoyable if you make up your mind to remember to accept "the will for the deed." If a sentimental, rather than a financial, valuation is placed on things you may receive, you will find yourself possessed of greater wealth than money can secure.

The child born on November 17, when it becomes of age, will very possibly have well defined ideas of its own as to exactly what career it wishes to follow. It probably might be inadvisable to try to persuade it to change its mind. Proper cooperation will prove helpful.

If a man, and November 17 is your birthday, your restless disposition may make you inclined to try first one thing, then another, without giving the seed of enthusiasm the chance to blossom into the flower of success. If you will remember that the successful shoemaker sticks to his last, your progress may be rapid. Botany, finance, mechanical or electrical engineering or a profession where oratorical ability counts, might provide the vehicle to prosperity.

Whole Wheat Waffle Recipe Takes Prize

Second Place Awarded for Kind Robert E. Lee First Enjoyed.

By Dorothea Duncan.

WAFFLES must be the South's favorite food by the number of recipes from down that way received in The Post's recipe contest this week.

First prize, $3, is awarded Mrs. W. C. McKee, Mansion and Baltimore avenues, Hyattsville, Md., for her recipe for Whole Wheat Waffles. The second prize $2, is awarded Miss M. A. Copeland, Round Hill, Va., for her recipe for Old Southern Waffles. Waffles made from the recipe submitted by Miss Copeland were first enjoyed by Gen. Robert E. Lee. The third prize, $1, goes to Miss Edna Windenburg, 4119 Nebraska avenue.

Whole Wheat Waffles.

2 cups whole wheat flour.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
¾ teaspoon salt.
1 1-3 cups milk.
2 eggs.
3 tablespoons melted butter.

Mix flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored, add milk, and then this liquid to the dry ingredients. Add melted butter and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a hot waffle iron. These waffles may be served with any number of toppings, but nothing complements them so well as melted butter, chopped nuts and confectioner's sugar.

Southern Waffles.

1 quart of sour milk (cream and all).
1 quart of sifted flour.
5 eggs, well beaten.
¼ teacup of water, with 2 tablespoons of vinegar.
1 teaspoon of bread soda.
2 teaspoons melted butter.
2 teaspoons baking powder.

The original recipe calls for two teaspoons of "monkey powders"—the name by which baking powders were known when this recipe was first used.

Mix and sift flour and other dry ingredients. Mix milk and water and beaten eggs, and blend with dry ingredients. Add melted butter. Bake in a hot waffle iron.

Gingerbread Waffles With Whipped Cream.

2 cups flour.
1½ teaspoons ginger.
1½ teaspoons soda.
½ teaspoon salt.
1 cup molasses.
1-3 cup butter.
2-3 cup buttermilk.
1 egg.
1 cup whipping cream.

Sift dry ingredients. Heat molasses and butter to boiling point. Remove from fire and add buttermilk to which has been added the well-beaten egg. Stir in dry ingredients. Bake in a hot, four-section waffle iron. Break each waffle into sections. Allow two sections for a serving with whipped cream between and on top of each serving. Recipe serves eight.

Waffle recipes receiving honorable mention may be obtained upon request mailed to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor, The Washington Post.

There was a request to repeat the third-prize-winning fruit cake recipe from last week, so here it is:

Hope Fruit Cake.

7½ eggs.
1½ pounds currants.
¼ pound citron.
6 ounces brandy.
¼ ounce nutmeg.
¾ pound sugar.
¾ pound flour, browned.
1½ pounds raisins, seeded.
3 ounces rose water.
¼ ounce cinnamon.
⅜ ounce cloves.
Grated rind of half an orange.

Prepare fruit the night befcre using. Unseeded raisins rather than the small seedless ones are preferred. Pour brandy over the fruit, cover tightly and let it stand until morning. Save a small amount of browned flour to mix with fruit. Cream butter and sugar together, and add eggs, beaten all together. Add flour by degrees, rose water and spices, and last of all the fruit. Bake 1 hour and 15 minutes in one pan. This is exactly one-fourth of the original recipe.

This cake will keep one to two years, as it contains no nuts or other ingredients to become rancid.

Best Sandwich Recipes to Win Cash Awards

THE ETERNAL sandwich question rises to confront every housewife who is giving a party. How can she serve a sandwich that is different?

New ideas for sandwiches will be welcomed in The Post's recipe contest next week.

The continued popularity of the sandwich depends on the number of interesting combinations of food that can be presented between two slices of bread. What sandwich pleases your children the most? What sandwich do you serve for tea, at bridge club, for buffet parties? Send in your recipes to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor, The Washington Post.

The Post's recipe contest next week will be devoted entirely to recipes for sandwiches. For the best recipe submitted, $3 will be awarded; for the second best, $2, and for the third best, $1.

Recipes should be typed if possible, if not, the writing should be clear and in pen and ink. Recipes should be checked carefully for omissions. The full name and address of the sender should appear on each separate sheet.

Contributions should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

LUXURY

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE.

Beautiful Jocelyn Crane is the dependent guest of the ultra-smart Oliver Keenes on a trip to Paris. Her role, she discovers, is increasingly difficult. She is supposed to keep pleasure-loving "Ollie" away from gold diggers, and screen Rita Keene's increasing infatuation for Prince Glazanoff.

On the way over Carrie Franks, Ollie's playmate of the moment, steals compromising letters belonging to Rita. Jocelyn recovers them, but Carrie hysterically breaks a string of pearls Mary Derby (a friend of Dick Crane's) has lent Jocelyn, and half of them fall into the sea.

In Paris Rita is lunching in Prince Glazanoff's apartment, but, alarmed at his increasing ardor, asks Jocelyn to turn up after luncheon. To punish Rita, he is attentive to Jocelyn when she arrives, and insists on accompanying them to a fashionable dressmaker's, where Rita has a fitting.

GLAZANOFF turned to a molten brass tray that held a samovar, cups and squat glasses. "A drop of cognac? Coffee?" He moved with the lithe, precise movements of a cat.

"Such a tiny place," Glazanoff apologized. "You like it—yes?" His back to Rita, his strange slanting eyes were on Jocelyn again. "Come, I will show you——" He put his hand under her elbow, towering over her, and in spite of herself she felt the animal magnetism of his superb body as he led her to the end of the room and drew the curtain aside on another, larger room.

There, in almost barbaric splendor, colors clashed like cymbals. Russian embroideries, Cossack scimitars, brass urns. Reds, greens, purples. Carved wooden stools. In a corner, a dim ikon. Behind a glass case squatted the grotesque wooden image of a hideous African goddess, with drooping breasts and knowing eyes.

"I should go mad in a room like this," Jocelyn said.

He whispered: "I should very much like to see you go mad."

Jocelyn heard Rita's voice. "Are you coming, Lynn?" She was furious at his interest in Jocelyn. "Boris, will you ask your man if the car is downstairs?"

"It is," Jocelyn said quietly. "I saw it when I came in."

Rita paid no attention to her. "Boris, have you seen my cigarette case? Where is my coat? I have an appointment at Manon's at 3."

He stood smiling down at her. "You go to Manon's? Dear lady, she is not for you. Mme. Crane—yes. Manon's is for her." Once again he looked at Jocelyn. "You will permit me to go with you? I know Manon well."

On that drive to Manon's, the smartest couturiere of the Paris season, Jocelyn Crane was increasingly uncomfortable. Her feeling about life, which she shared with Dick, rebelled against the intrigues which her position as a guest of the Keenes forced upon her.

The clouded May afternoon was not sultrier than Rita's small white face as she leaned back in her car.

Jocelyn, as Rita's friend and obviously of the Oliver Keene's world, would serve as a weapon of tempered steel to drive into the other woman's heart, though Jocelyn, with her exquisite patrician profile, the straight look in her golden brown eyes, was not Glazanoff's type.

So, as they neared Manon's, Boris plotted and smiled, aware that among women, clothes were the stem of the root of all evil. And Manon played into his hands.

A Lovely Creation.

Cocktails and tea were served by footmen in Manon's black and white liveries in Manon's black and white salon. Along the white carpet, mannikins swayed and paced, in every rhythm a sense of the exotic bloom Manon, herself, exhaled.

"Ah, Madame!" She bent her clever head to greet Rita. "Your fitting is ready. But I brg of you to wait. I have created a model to show for the first time this afternoon. It is divine!"

Jocelyn, drawn into the skill and art of the place, forgot everything that wotried her. Then the gown came in on an ashen blonde. Never had there been anything so beautiful, Jocelyn thought, leaning forward with an exclamation.

Glazanoff noticed Rita's eyes deepen to flag-blue, the quivered wing of her thin nostrils. She beckoned to Manon, who leaned to whisper in Rita's ear.

"I want it just as it is," Rita turned to Glazanoff. "No one else must order a gown like it. I'll buy the model—though I do think," her tone grew plaintive, "I do think, Manon, considering all the things I've ordered here, you could lower your price. Five hundred dollars is too much!"

An Annoying Suggestion.

"You will permit?" Glazanoff interrupted to stare lazily at Rita. "That gown is not for you. Do you not see——?" He waved at the girl who modeled it. "Mademoiselle is tall like Mme. Crane," and his slow gaze went to Jocelyn. "Is it not so, Manon? A great triumph for you, ma chere, if Madame—who knows everyone—appears in that toilette."

Jocelyn colored under Manon's puckered and keen eyes, undressing, redressing her, as she nodded in agreement. "That is so, Prince."

"Oh, but I couldn't——" Jocelyn cried. "I couldn't——" she started to say "afford"—paused on that one word that was never pronounced in this salon. Women might bargain and demur they might be in debt, but never, never did they state they couldn't afford——

Rita's voice stabbed like an icicle in the silence. "I'll be glad to give you the dress, Jocelyn, since Boris seems to be so sure you will look well in it."

"Ca c'est gentil!" Glazanoff murmured with an amused twist of his lips. "That, indeed, is royal of you, Madame."

Refusal Overriden.

Jocelyn rose. "I'm sorry," she said, "but I can't possibly accept your kindness, Rita."

Rita shrugged her shoulders. "Don't be absurd, Jocelyn," she said carelessly. Brushing aside Jocelyn's sharpened refusal, she directed Manon—"Send it to the hotel. Madame and I are going to a dinner at the Ritz. She can wear it there."

But Jocelyn, whom no one had consulted, felt the ache of angry tears in her head, her throat raw and gritty when she swallowed. That's what money did, she thought hotly. It gave an overpowering advantage. Very well, then, she would wear the gown. She would show Rita that the one thing she could afford was to return an insult in her own fashion.

"The Ritz tonight? Oh, yes—I'd forgotten," she said, smiling at Manon. "That will be very nice, Rita." And it might have been a bit of linen Rita offered.

When they got back on the street, Jocelyn excused herself. No, she wouldn't have more tea, thank you. She preferred to walk home.

Heart Grew Hard.

During that walk, which lasted over an hour and took her through streets, past faces she didn't see, something happened to her. Perhaps this thing had been happening ever since, against her will, she obeyed Dick and came on this trip. Perhaps when Mary Derby clasped those unfortunate pearls around her neck or when she argued with Carrie Franks on the decks of the Ile de France, the slow process of hardening had been under way.

Suddenly she was glad she was going to the Ritz to dinner in the beautiful gown. The princely Porters were giving the dinner, she remembered now, with a sense of pleasure at the idea of seeing Elaine Porter again.

Her steps were light as finally she found herself back at the Georges V, her hand on the salon door that was open a crack. Ollie's voice was raised in peevish anger. Instinctively she paused, wishing she could reach her room other than by passing through the salon.

"You're too extravagant, Rita," she heard Ollie growl. "What are all these gimcracks, anyway? I paid a bill of several thousand dollars to that Manon woman only a few days ago."

"I bought a few little things for myself." Rita's voice was smooth as cream. "But the most expensive item on the bill is for Jocelyn."

Rita Was Ruthless.

Then Jocelyn opened the door, this new Jocelyn who had shaped her course. "Oh, hello," she said gayly, and glanced at the boxes strewn around the room, foaming over with tissue paper, negligees, lingerie. One unopened box lay on the marble-topped table.

"Your dress is here," Rita looked from Jocelyn to Ollie's red face, trying to grin.

"How awfully nice!" Jocelyn took it with the smile of someone who rather expects pleasant things of life. She crossed over to the box, undid the broad ribbon. As she lifted the supple brocade, a thrill went through her. No one should destroy her joy in this gown. She held it up for Ollie to see. "Isn't it just too gorgeous?"

Ollie teetered nearer, cocking his head, regarding her with approval. "Stunning!" All of a sudden he was delighted.

Walking up the Ritz hall beside Rita, who tonight was in deep blue tulle to match her eyes, Jocelyn knew herself far the most beautiful woman there. Dear, clattering Elaine Porter told her so, and called upon all the men to agree with her. That was Elaine's way of being popular.

But there was one man present whom she had not expected to see, and when slowly he came forward, Jocelyn couldn't analyze, herself, the sensation with which she looked up into Ogden Temple's face.

Elaine drew her aside to whisper: "My dear, Porter told me to invite him, but I never thought he'd come. I'm a little scared of him myself. He's got too many millions and too many brains. So I've put you next to him, darling." And impulsively she leaned over to kiss Jocelyn. "It's so good to have you with us again." That was Elaine's comment on the marriage which had spirited Jocelyn away from her crowd.

With the green turtle soup and sherry, Jocelyn furtively studied the profile of this man she had once thought so strikingly ugly.

He seemed to overhang her like a rock jutting out from the arresting sea blue of his eyes.

"Have you made up your mind?" he said, almost as soon as they had sat down.

"About what?" Jocelyn showed that he had startled her.

He give the old sherry its due, lifting it to the light. "I have—at last," he went on, as if she had not spoken "I was not sure until I saw you tonight in that gown. We are going to love each other, and it will not be a slight affair. I never indulge in them."

On the Air Today

By George M. Adams, Jr.

A NEW announcer, Paul C. Munroe, began work for the local outlets of the National Broadcasting Co., WRC and WMAL, yesterday.

Coming from station WTIC at Hartford, Conn., Munroe brought a past that included chauffering an oil truck in Westchester County, N. Y., and concert work at the Radio City Music Hall in New York City.

His educational record includes terms at Phillips-Andover Academy, Northeastern University, University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech and Harvard. He emerged with a master of arts degree and command of the Russian language.

Mr. Munroe has that concert recital lilt to his voice that makes Irving Berlin ditties sound like Tschaikovsky. His diction is splendid and his checkered suits not so bad.

"GOODNIGHT, pleasant dreams, God bless you"—the words with which Roxy signed off his first broadcast in New York 12 years ago, tonight will hold special significance for hundreds of stars he has developed since the days of crystal sets and earphones.

His broadcast at 8 o'clock on WJSV tonight, therefore, will be in the nature of an anniversary with the genial showman still coaxing members of his "Gang" to the mike.

"Station Breaks."

Congratulations to Warren Sweeney, of WJSV's announcing staff, Warren became the proud father of a young son, John Michael, Thursday morning. The lad "will not" take up announcing, says Warren, but will play Chopin waltzes. . . . Harold Gray, also of WJSV's announcing laddies, was presented with a token of appreciation from the U. S. Army Band which he has putting on the air for C. B. S.'s network these many months . . . Eddie Perkins, that young, happy-go-lucky usher at the Fox, replaces Bert Granoff and Helen Ault tomorrow on WRC's "Sunday Serenade" at 12:30 p. m. . . . Mme. Marie von Unschuld, a very charming lady who plays classical pieces on the piano at WMAL, has been asked by Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, to play a special program next Friday at 2:45 p. m. for officials of the Bureau of Education who are interested in the surprising effects she gains through synchronizing her playing with the accompaniment of orchestral recordings. Mrs. Ickes will hear the program from WRC's reception room . . . Jimmie Wilkinson, local singer, late of "Yesterday's Inspiration," piped to the Southeast, will start a 26-week contract with General Foods and Frances Lee Barton's Cooking School broadcasts at 11:15 a. m. Thursdays on WRC . . . Trained fleas, imported specially for the Broadway trade, will be put through their paces by Prof. William Heckler on WOL today at 8:15 p. m.

FRANK J. HOGAN, attorney, will be guest speaker tonight when WMAL's array of Washington's radio blessed marches past a mike from 8 to 9 o'clock in support of the Community Chest campaign.

In addition to local talent, musicians from Sidney's and McWilliam's orchestras will furnish music under direction of Rudy Schramm and Phil O'Brien, respectively. This is made possible through the courtesy of the local branch of the American Federation of Musicians, who granted services of these units gratis.

E. Phillips Oppenheim Paged by U.S. for $901

The Government wants $901 from E. Phillips Oppenheim, the author, according to the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals ruled yesterday this amount was owed on income for 1928 and 1929.

The decision, which described the author as a nonresident alien residing at Cagnes-sur-mer, France, upheld the ruling of the Bureau of Internal Revenue that compensation received from an American publishing house should be taxed as ordinary income from the sale of property rather than earned income.

The author had claimed the income was derived from personal services.

Twelfth Street Christian.

The Rev. J. F. Whitfield will take for his subject tomorrow at 11 a. m., "Adopted Children." The ordinance of baptism will be administered at 12:15 p. m., to be followed by communion services. The Rev. C. Lego Whitfield, pastor of the Mount Olivet Christian Church, of Baltimore, will preach at 3:30 p. m. Evangelistic services and prayer meeting will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday.

Church of Christ.

Evangelist James H. McBroom will preach at 11 a. m., taking for his title "Bible Mules." He will begin a new series of sermons at 8 p. m. with the subject "The First Three Boys of the Bible."

Ninth Street Congregation To Aid Needy

"Old Clothes Night" Will Be Observed at Christian Church.

"Old Clothes Night" will be observed at the Ninth Street Christian Church tomorrow at 7:45 p. m., when members of the congregation will contribute serviceable clothes and shoes for distribution to the needy through the Social Service Department.

The pastor, the Rev. Clifford H. Jope, will continue his series of sermons, the theme for tomorrow evening being "The Lost Soul." The choir will sing "O God, My Soul Thirsteth for Thee" by Greenish. There will be a baptism at this service.

At the morning worship and communion service at 11 o'clock, the pastor will preach on "Seeking the Highest Good." The junior congregation, meeting at the same hour, will have for its theme, "The Inner Circle," under the direction of J. A. Scott.

The church Bible School will meet at 9:30 a. m., while the Alpha and Forum Christian Endeavor Societies will meet at 6:45 p. m.

The annual public turkey dinner will be served Wednesday evening in the church dining hall by the women's council.

Christian Science Churches.

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow. The golden text is from Romans 8:21: "The creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God." (II Corinthians 4:15.)

Universalist National Memorial.

"Loving God With the Mind" is the sermon topic of the Rev. Fredric W. Perkins, D. D., for tomorrow at 11 a. m. A dramatization of "Japanese Women Speak," the mission study book of the year, will be presented Tuesday afternoon at a meeting of the mission circle. Luncheon will be served at 12:15 p. m. to be followed by a short business meeting and the play.

Christ Lutheran.

The pastor, the Rev. J. Frederick Wenchel, will preach on "The Last Enemy Conquered" at 11 a. m. tomorrow. The last sermon of a series on "The Last Judgment" will be delievered next Sunday. The Sunday school will hold a special harvest home festival tomorrow, from which gifts will be sent to the Augsburg Home for Children and Aged.

Preparedness in the Bidding.

The backbone of the Culbertson System is the Approach Principle, which, in essence, states that suits are to be shown and as much information as possible exchanged at the lower levels of bidding. A corollary of this principle is the policy of not raising without adequate trump support.

However, under the Principle of Preparedness many established rules must occasionally be broken. The Principle of Preparedness in the bidding is merely the result of the natural desire of the good bidder to keep out of troublesome situations and to avoid getting into bidding jams. It is the principle that one should look ahead in the bidding and anticipate the various possible responses which his partner may make in order that he may pick his own bids properly when faced with a choice.

A very good example of preparedness is seen in the following situation. Your partner, as dealer, opens the bidding with one spade and the next hand passes. Your holding is:

Spades J 5 4
Hearts 7
Diamonds A 9 6 4 3
Clubs J 10 5 4

On this hand you have less than adequate trump support for your partner's spade but with over one honor-trick and good distribution you do not wish to pass. The automatic thoughtless response would be two diamonds. However, if you look ahead in the bidding you will see that this bid can not possibly do any good. You admittedly have a weak hand and you desire only to give one chance to your partner; you do not wish to make any subsequent rebids. If you bid two diamonds on this hand you will, if you do not overbid by showing spade support later, be concealing from your partner the semi-fit which may be the making of the hand. Therefore, since you are giving just one chance, why not give it where the chief hope of game seems to lie?

For instance, suppose your partner's original spade bid consisted of:

Spades A Q 10 9 5 4
Hearts 7 4 2
Diamonds K 5
Clubs A Q

Even though he has a pretty good hand, over two diamonds he can do nothing but simply rebid his spades. You, with your meager holding, will now be forced to pass and a laydown game will have been missed. Had you bid two spades right over one spade, however, South, knowing that the hands fit, would have been able to jump to four spades.

You may say that this is all well and good, but four spades could have been reached by bidding two diamonds and then over two spades raising to three. However, your partner's one-and-two-spade bids might have been made on the following hand:

Spades A K 9 5 4
Hearts K 5
Diamonds 7 4 3
Clubs K 6 4

With this hand the opening bidder would bid two sapdes over two diamonds and then, if you raised to three spades, would be justified in gambling on four. A contract of four spades on this hand would be hopeless even with the best possible division of cards and, if the cards were divided badly, might go down as much as three or four tricks. But if, with the same original holding, you simply bid two spades over one spade, the opening bidder of course would now pass and you would be at a safe contract.

Again, suppose that the opening spade bidder responds to your takeout of two diamonds, not with two spades but with two notrump. Naturally, with your 5-4-3-1 distribution you can not stand a notrump contract and, looking for a safe out, you now bid three spades. However, your partner can not possibly read your three-spade bid as a rescue. He reads it as a strength-showing bid and as an inferential force. His holding may be something like

Diamonds Q 5
Clubs K 6 4 2

and he may be very glad to go on to game. But whether he chooses to bid three notrump or four spades, you find yourself at a hopeless game contract. Had you responded with two spades, your partner would have made one rebid of two notrump. Over two notrump you could have bid three diamonds and your partner would have known you had a weak hand, as otherwise you would have shown your diamond suit in the first place. Over three diamonds the opening bidder will either pass or bid three spades to give you one more chance. You will pass and you will at least have stopped under game, and in addition the opponents almost certainly will not double.

Daughter Asks Court For Madden Estate

An estate consisting of real property assessed at $85,000 and personal property, consisting of cash, stocks, bonds and other securities, was left by Mrs. Josephine Madden, who died October 7, it was shown yesterday in the District Supreme Court when her daughter, Mrs. Mabel Madden Henderson, filed a petition asking for appointment as administrator.

Through Attorney Howard S. LeRoy, the daughter said she was an only child and that there were no others entitled to share in the estate. Under District law she is entitled to the estate.

Round Table Hears Hooper Radio Talk

The far-flung network of the United States naval communications system was described to members of the Washington Round Table yesterday by Capt. S. C. Hooper, its chief. Capt. Hooper, who recently returned to Washington from the technical radio conference in Lisbon, Portugal, discussed the part played by the Navy in the development of radio.

Two new members were admitted to the club, Earle S. Buckingham, photographer, and Graydon Walker, of The Washington Post.

Members of the club have been invited to a special "Round Table Night" at the Hamline M. E. Church, Sixteenth and Allison streets, Sunday, November 25, when the Rev. E. O. Clark, of the Chevy Chase Baptist Church, will speak.

Metropolitan Museum's Curator Taken by Death

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Bryson Burroughs, 65, curator of paintings in the Metropolitan Museum of Art since 1907, died at his home today.

A famous painter before he went to the Metropolitan Museum, Burroughs' work won him recognition here and abroad early in the century. His paintings hang in many collections in this country and Europe.

Noted Actor Fatally Hurt At Richmond

Dallas Anderson Failed to Survive Hurts in Auto Crash.

Took Major Role With Maude Adams in "Little Minister."

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—Dallas Anderson, 60, long a figure on the American stage, died today at the City Hospital here from multiple injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile Tuesday night.

Anderson was one of the three principals of the Walter Hampden company, which played here Tuesday and Wednesday.

Anderson returned frequently to his native Scotland and appeared in many British-made motion pictures. He created a major role in Maude Adams' original "Little Minister" more than 15 years ago, and recently toured with the actress on the occasion of her return to the stage. He played opposite Blanche Yurka in the prolonged Broadway engagement of Ibsen's "Wild Duck" several years ago, later taking a company on the road as actor-manager. Anderson made his residence at the Players Club, Gramercy Square, New York. He was a bachelor.

Morris VanSant.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Morris VanSant, 81, died last night at the home of his sister, Miss Jennie VanSant, with whom he resided.

He is also survived by another sister, Mrs. Belle Grose, Sykesville, Md.; two nephews, Lorenzo D. VanSant, advertising specialist, and J. Homer VanSant, this city, and a niece, Mrs. Florence Carter, of Washington.

Miss Margaret M. Price.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.). — Funeral services will be conducted here tomorrow for Miss Margaret May Price, 59, who died at her home here Wednesday night.

She was a daughter of the late Charles C. Price, a Union soldier from New Jersey, who settled in this section after the Civil War. She was a lifelong resident of Martinsburg. Her mother was the late Eliza (Martin) Price, of Frederick County, Va.

She is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Belle Wilson, of Hagerstown, Md.; Miss Nettie Price, Mrs. Daisy Cook and Miss Nelle Price, all at home, and three brothers, Lewis, Samuel and Harry Price, this city.

James Hunter Lewis.

Winchester, Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Funeral services for James Hunter Lewis, 55, who was found unconscious on the banks of the Monongahela River at McKeesport, Pa., were conducted today from the home of his mother, Mrs. Georgianna Lewis, here.

McKeesport authorities, suspecting foul play, are investigating the death of Mr. Lewis. Death was attributed to a fractured skull.

Besides his mother, he is survived by two brothers, Willard Lewis, McKeesport, and Grover Lewis, of Winchester; one sister, Mrs. Ada Steele, of Winchester, and one son, Orlando, also of Winchester.

Mrs. Catherine Sanders.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Funeral services for Mrs. Catherine Sanders, 74, widow of Henry Saunders, merchant, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bernard J. W. Williams, were held today in St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Walter McCluskey, Cleveland, Ohio, and another daughter, Mrs. Ida A. Schaidt, wife of City Engineer Henry W. Schaidt.

Mrs. Margaret Parrish.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Margaret R. Parrish, 62, of Abermarle County, who died here yesterday as the result of a fall she suffered in Hot Springs, Va.

Mrs. Parrish is survived by two brothers, George J. Roberts, of Newark, N. J., and Edward A. Roberts, of New York City.

Mrs. Mary J. Kent.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Funeral services for Mrs. Mary J. Kent, 90, of Spring Valley, Abermarle County, who died at her home yesterday, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the Locust Church in Nelson County.

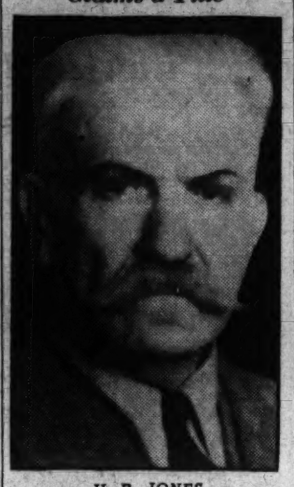
Mrs. Kent is survived by her husband, Thomas A. Kent, and ten children, Thomas L. Kent, of West Point; J. W. and H. L. Kent, of Heards; A. R. Kent, of Clifton Forge; H. C. Kent, of Greenfield, Va.; Mrs. J. S. Pugh, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. J. G. Woodson, of Avon, Va.; Mrs. H. E. Ligett, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. John L. Woodson, of North Garden, Va., and Mrs. J. Rittenhouse, of Greenfield, Va.

Md. Mission Guilds Plan Institute Today

Westminster, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Sponsored by the Girls' Missionary Guilds of the Maryland Classis of the Reformed Church, an institute will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening at Baust Reformed Church, near Westminster, Carroll County.

The principal speaker will be Charles LeGalley, missionary and teacher recently returned from Japan. Representatives from guilds in all sections of the classis will attend.

Claims a Title



H. B. JONES,
of Hagerstown, Md., who at 60 years, claims to being the youngest great-grandfather in the United States. Mr. Jones says he is two years younger than Mr. and Mrs. Warren Mosso, of West Warren, Mass., who claim that they are the youngest great-grandparents. Mr. Jones was married at 16 years; his son, William R. Jones, at 17 and the former's grandson, Russell Jones, at 17. Mr. Jones claims that his youngest child, Mrs. Leah Sullivan, 23, is the youngest aunt in the country, being an aunt when she was a year old.

Free Patient Quota Passed By 3 Hospitals

Figures for Cumberland Memorial Institution Challenged.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Among the State-aided hospitals in Maryland which have spent approximately $200,000 in excess of the funds given them by the State to care for free patients during the fiscal year ended September 30, the Memorial Hospital is listed as one of the three which failed to earn quotas.

Harvey H. Weiss, superintendent, questioned today regarding the report of the Board of State Aid and Charities, said the Memorial Hospital had actually cared for more charity patients than it received credit for.

Data to Be Presented.

Thomas B. Finan, chairman of the board of governers, presented data to show the local institution expended more than its quota. The recent deficit of $30,000 in operating revenues was attributed to the large number of charity patients and unpaid bills of other patients.

The Allegany Hospital, conducted by the Sisters of Charity, spent $3,497.56 more in charity work than its quota. The State fund was $11,000, while the hospital expended $14,497.56 for free patients.

Figures Challenged.

According to the report, the Memorial Hospital spent $10,253.76 and was allotted $11,000 for free patients. Superintendent Weiss said the figures are incorrect and that records to adjust the report will be submitted to the State board.

Samuel S. Shannahan, chairman of the Board of State Aid and Charities, announced that $332,500 had been given the 29 hospitals in the State to care for free patients, but that the large number of patients actually cared for represented an additional cost of $196,468.62.

County May Seek Mail Deliveries by Truck

Bowling Green, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Caroline County may seek truck deliveries for its mail as a result of the discontinuation of trains 5 and 26 by the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad, county citizens said yesterday.

Cessation of the trains will cause mail southbound to Caroline to be delayed for three hours, residents said.

Inquest Finds Officer Shot Accidentally

Ashburn Hunter Freed in Fatal Row Over Chased Cat.

Witnesses Say Gun Used as Club Discharged by Mistake.

Ashburn, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—A verdict of accidental death was returned by the county coroner, Dr. John A. Gibson, this morning after hearing evidence on the death of William M. Adrian, 37, Washington policeman, who died at his father's home Thursday evening of a gunshot wound in the abdomen, said to have been self-inflicted.

The shooting followed an argument with A. D. Neale, principal of the Ashburn High School, over a cat belonging to the Adrians. Neale was returning from a hunting trip when the accident occurred.

Evidence at the inquest substantiated Neale's statement that as he passed near Adrian's yard his dog chased the cat and, in order to call the dog away, he fired the gun. Adrian, who was at the barn, called to Neale to stop as he crossed the yard to meet the huntsman.

Adrian slapped Neale in the face and knocked his cap off, so one witness testified, as he took his gun from him. He then struck Neale with the butt of the gun, the blow landing on the man's hip pocket, which was filled with shells. The gun broke in two pieces as it discharged, the load entering Adrian's body just above the stomach. He died in a few minutes.

Witnesses today included Robert E. Adrian, father of the dead man; Fred D. Ball, who was an eyewitness to the tragedy; Neale and Fred Dove, who saw the accident from a distance.

Neale testified that Adrian said, "What are you shooting at that cat for?" and, as Neale said, "I will explain," Adrian struck the blow.

The funeral will be held at the Ashburn Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Four Accidentally Shot As Hunt Season Opens

Frederick, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Four persons were accidentally shot, none seriously on the opening day of the hunting season in this county yesterday. More than 4,000 licenses to hunt were issued by the clerk of the court, and hundreds of sportsmen took the field.

Samuel Sterling, of Washington, formerly of Point of Rocks, was accidentally shot by his brother, Carl Sterling, while hunting. They were about 150 feet apart and a number of shot lodged in the face and right hand of the victim. He was treated by a physician at Adamstown.

Charles Wood, 26, New Market, was accidentally shot in the right leg by Leonard Norris, also of New Market. The men were about 100 feet apart when the shot was fired.

Accidental Discharge Is Fatal to Hunter

Winchester, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Thomas Dellinger, 20, of Conicsville, Va., died in a hospital here today of a wound received when his shotgun was accidentally discharged while hunting in the Shenandoah Mountains yesterday.

Dellinger, his brother, Clayton, and a cousin, Morrie Smoot, were walking through a hilly section when Dellinger slipped and fell over a rocky ledge, discharging his gun. A load of buckshot struck him in the upper leg and abdomen.

Samuel Stephenson.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Samuel Stephenson, 75, wealthy West Virginia lumber and real estate operator, fell dead today while inspecting timber in a forest near Summerville. Physicians said death was probably due to a heart attack.

Stephenson, whose home was at Charleston, was a brother of D. H. Stephenson, former sheriff of Kawanawha County.

Along the Tri-State Trail

with

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor

There are fewer horses in Virginia than farms.

It might sound strange, but Henry M. Taylor, agricultural statistician, has figures for doubters. He attributes this current condition to the rapid development of the automobile industry and the abandonment by the farmer of his former chief source of power. Farmers, he says, have replaced their work horses with tractors and their pleasure horses with touring cars.

We don't know whether Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Virginia's famous horsewoman, of Upperville, is superstittious or not, but evidently the number "13" has no fears for her. It was on thirteenth of November that she rode her big gray gelding, Bon Diable, to victory in the $1,000 sweepstakes at Madison Square Garden, New York City.

The Kenmore Association, at Fredericksburg, Va., has just received a letter from Clarksburg, W. Va., addressed to "Miss Betty Washington Lewis Kenmore, Fredericksburg, Va." The fact that she was the first president's sister, and many generations have passed since she occupied the historical spot, was apparently of only minor importance to the writer. The letter comments on a newspaper article about Kenmore and its former mistress, and requests genealogical information regarding the "Washington line."

The itinerary of the Tri-State-Trail hasn't brought us the poundage of all deer shot so far this season, but we understand that E. C. Sine, of Hambleton, W. Va., will pit a buck he recently bagged near Slip Hill against all comers. He weighed 260 pounds.

Now that the hunting season has opened in full swing, the demand for beagles, coon dogs and setters is causing a rising market. So great is the demand in Caroline County, Md., that authorities are having difficulty in running down persons who are taking dogs without the benefit of financial transactions.

U. D. C. Session to Hear Of Southern Magazine

Publication, Founded a Year Ago, Has Been Acclaimed Throughout South; Miss Hagy and Mrs. Porter Directors.

Wytheville, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—When the United Daughters of the Confederacy go to New York, November 20, for their first convention in the North, they will take with them the first annual report on their latest achievement, the year-old Southern Magazine.

The magazine is published and edited by two Daughters—Miss Claudia M. Hagy, managing editor, and Mrs. Albert Sidney Porter, U. D. C. editor—"in the interest of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Southern States."

"It is devoted to the truth of Southern history, literature, art, music and poetry—past and present," said Miss Hagy, who conceived the idea of publishing the magazine, and persuaded the Daughters to adopt it as their official organ at the 1933 convention in Baltimore.

Since it was founded in March, 1934, the magazine has been published monthly, featuring one Southern State in each issue, beginning with South Carolina, and following in the order of the secession of the Confederate States. The States sponsored through September were South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Maryland and Tennessee.

Miss Hagy, a native of Wytheville, is assisted by Mrs. Porter, a former resident of Portsmouth, Va., and by her brother, F. Eugene Hagy, who acts as manager.

The magazine has been received with approval throughout the U. D. C. organization.

"When we adopted the publication in Baltimore last year, we expected it to be a small, thin magazine, not much more than a pamphlet," said Mrs. Charles E. Bolling, Richmond, former national officer, and a member of the Stratford committee of the U. D. C. "You may well imagine our pleasant surprise when we saw the first issue, so well done with a frontispiece of Charleston's Azalea Gardens in colors—a magazine of 60 pages. Every issue since has been received with wide acclaim.

The "Southern Magazine" is the successor to the "Confederate Veteran," which for nearly two score years served as the official publication of the veterans, the daughters and the sons. Its publication was abandoned in 1932. In 1933 the daughters used a weekly page in the Atlanta Journal. They hope the sons will join them in their "Southern Magazine" enterprise.

All Cash Relief Ends in County

Frederick Edict Affects 1,800 Families When $10,000 Is Cut.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 16 (AP).—Approximately 1,800 families on Frederick County relief rolls will receive no cash assistance this week, it was disclosed here today.

Welfare board officials announced that a cut of $10,000 in Federal relief funds allotted to Frederick County is the cause of the temporary discontinuance of aid to families on direct or work relief.

The families were notified some time ago, officials said, that the discontinuance would be necessary, and were advised to save as much as possible of their relief checks to provide for themselves during the period.

Commodity distribution, including butter, canned beef and other supplies, will continue as usual, it was explained, during that time.

Whiteley Files General Denial

Socialite Makes Reply to Wife's Charge of Abuse and Desertion.

Baltimore, Nov. 16 (AP).—Charges of cruelty, abuse and desertion alleged in a bill of complaint by his wife, today were denied in an answer filed in Towson Circuit by T. Evans Whiteley, of Monkton, Md.

Mrs. Whiteley charged her husband deserted her in the Towson police station, and that she was ill for several weeks as a result of his "abuse, cruel and inhuman treatment."

Whiteley denied her charges, and stated in his answer he is unable to pay $25 a week to his wife and $500 counsel fees as provided in a court order after the filing of his wife's bill.

Both Whiteley and his wife are socially prominent in Baltimore.

Attacker Suspect Faces Grand Jury

Alleged Assailant of Girl Is Called for Monday.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 16 (AP).—William Carter, colored, charged with an attempted attack on Miss Geraldine Kreh, local playground instructor, several weeks ago, will be brought before the county grand jury Monday.

State's Attorney Walter E. Sinn said that Carter has made a written confession. He is being held in the Baltimore City Jail where he was taken shortly after his arrest.

Miss Kreh, who was seized as she walked across a deserted section of a Frederick municipal park, suffered a fractured jaw in fighting off her assailant. Physicians say she is recuperating satisfactorily.

Dream of Crash Awakens Pastor At Wheel of Car

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). The Rev. Lloyd G. Davis, pastor of the Washington Square Methodist Episcopal Church, here, doesn't believe in dreams, but his dream yesterday while returning from a hunting trip in Carroll County he attributed to saving him from an accident.

Afield most of the day, during which he bagged four rabbits, he dozed while driving home and said he dreamed a car came out a side road and crashed into him.

Startled by the dream, he awoke to find his car still on the road.

Divorced Wife Seeks Alimony

Dr. Zack J. Waters Named in Action Filed at Middletown.

Middletown, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Mrs. Elizabeth P. Waters, of Moyock, N. C., formerly of Myersville, yesterday filed suit in the Frederick County Court against her divorced husband, Dr. Zack J. Waters, of Myersville and Middletown, seeking a change in the wording of an agreement which they entered into while divorce proceedings were pending.

Mrs. Waters charges that the agreement filed in court is not the same contract which she signed.

Alimony which she was to receive under the agreement depends on the change, Mrs. Waters indicates. She says that under the present wording of the agreement her divorced husband, who has since remarried, is not paying her anything.

Mrs. Waters says she obtained a divorce October 27, 1933, and no provision was made for the payment of alimony. After filing the complaint, and before the signing of the decree, she says, Dr. Waters agreed to pay her $75 per month for her support, to continue until her death or remarriage.

Dickinson Calls For 'Local Relief'

Warns of Making Charity 'Permanent Habit.'

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—John Dickinson, assistant secretary of commerce, believes it is better for citizens to meet charity needs through voluntary contributions than to leave this function to the Government and risk "consequences which no citizen who cares for his country can contemplate with indifference."

This view was expressed last night at a mass meeting opening the Richmond Community Fund's campaign to raise $555,545. Jimmy Mattern, round-the-world flier, and a number of local speakers also were heard.

Mr. Dickinson warned against letting Federal relief aid become "a permanent habit," saying that this would make citizens pensioners of the Government at Washington to an extent incomparable with free institutions.

CCC Given Credit By Prison Head For Cut in Crime

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—Superintendent Rice M. Youell, of the State Penitentiary, today gave credit to the Civilian Conservation Corps camps for a part of a decrease of 156 in the number of prisoners committed to the penitentiary in the last nine months, as compared with the same period last year.

He said many of the young men employed in the camps are about the age of those who get in trouble when they are idle, and he believes keeping them occupied has prevented many from committing crimes.

Park Work Wins Praise For Carson

Conservation Chairman Is Praised for Aid on Shenandoah.

Cites Financial Aid of Group in Tract Developing.

A lion's share of the credit for progress made toward establishment of the Shenandoah National Park was given yesterday by Arno B. Cammerer, national parks director, to William E. Carson, chairman of the Virginia Conservation and Development Commission, the Associated Press reported.

In a letter to Carson, Cammerer wrote:

"I venture to say that no one man has done more toward the completion of this project than you have."

Carson soon will retire from the chairmanship of the commission, which has been reorganized to provide from a full-time chairman.

Hails Conservation Work.

Cammerer's letter to Carson follows in full:

"Ever since the presentation of the 176,429 acres of land by the State of Virginia to the Federal Government for the Shenandoah National Park, I have had it in mind to write you, congratulating you on the achievement. You certainly played an important role in the long, hard struggle of acquiring the land for this park. I venture to say that no one man has done more toward the completion of this project than you have, in fact, you have been an outstanding figure in conservation in general in the State of Virginia.

"In your public-spirited way you added impetus to the movement for the establishment of the Colonial National Monument and were responsible for bringing to the attention of the State Legislature the importance of the acquisition of Jamestown Island, resulting in its appropriating half of the funds necessary for its purchase.

Preserved Historic Shrines.

"Your untiring and enthusiastic interest in the preservation of historic shrines in Virginia, as evidenced in the restoration of Washington's mill and the betterment of Monticello, has been praiseworthy in itself. The development of the historical section of the Conservation and Development Commission under your leadership has been notable, and the inauguration of historical markers along the roadsides of Virginia, for which you were responsible, was an innovation which has since been followed by many other States.

"Under your guidance as chairman of the commission, the State park movement was started in Virginia, and has grown by leaps and bounds, with eight State parks, among them the Richmond Battlefield, now under development.

"You have been responsible for many other outstanding contributions to conservation, and we of the National Park Service have always found it a pleasure and an inspiration to work with you on any of the projects in which the Federal Government has been concerned. Virginia may well be proud of you, as we all are, for your success in many lines of endeavor, but particularly for what you have done for the State in matters of conservation."

Bone From Boy's Leg Patches Up His Skull

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). A piece of bone taken from his leg was grafted over a hole in the skull of Lauren Ridenour, 7, at the Washington County Hospital yesterday.

It was necessary to remove a piece of the skull two years ago when the boy was struck by an ingate bar.

Good morning! Have you motored over the new Skyline Drive in Virginia? Completed several years ago but closed until all safeguards were finished, this marvelous road overlooking the Shenandoah Valley has just been opened. Put on your tweeds and enjoy it. Try it while Autumn foliage is glorious.

Pennsylvania Revenue Plans Are Discussed

State C. of C. Official Addresses Clubs at Waynesboro.

Waynesboro, Pa., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—At a joint meeting of Rotarians, Lions and the Chamber of Commerce here tonight, Dr. Leonard P. Fox, manager of the research and information bureau of the State Chamber of Commerce, discussed the the problems of finance which will face the next Legislature. One hundred and fifty people attended the meeting.

Dr. Fox asked: 'How shall $178,000,000 in new State revenue be raised to meet the estimated expense of the government for the next biennium beginning June 1?'

He suggested a half dozen new taxing schemes which would raise an estimated $172,500,000, leaving a deficit of about $6,000,000 at the end of the next biennium.

These new forms of taxation which will be presented by representatives of the chamber, are not recommendations of the organizations, but are merely suggestions for consideration, Dr. Fox declared.

Other topics discussed were NRA legislation, State constitutional revision, school administration and finance, crime reduction and public saftey, public utility legislation and pensions.

Murder Suspect Sought.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 16 (AP). Authorities here have been asked to aid in the search for an unidentified man alleged to have shot and killed James Gillis, 50, of Terra Alta, W. Va., early today.

Police Join For Training In Virginia

Will Promote Uniform Schooling in the Old Dominion.

Third State Instruction College Ended in Richmond.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—The third Virginia police instructors' school came to an end tonight after those attending had organized the institute for Virginia police instructors, intended to promote uniform police training throughout the State.

Harold I. Baumes, director of personnel training of the League of Virginia Municipalities, who was made secretary of the institute, said it would assist in holding the instructors who have taken the three years' standard course together as a unit and would be the means of distributing to them information regarding late developments in police work and written material regarding police problems.

New Group's Officers.

Officers chosen were Sergt. Ted Miller, Norfolk, president; Lieut. William C. Thomas, State Division of Motor Vehicles, vice president, and Mr. Baumes, secretary.

Principal speakers of the banquet program tonight were James H. Price, Lieutenant Governor of Virginia; Capt. Albert B. Moore, inspector, headquarters division, New York State Police, who directed the school; Capt. A. S. Wright, of the Richmond police department; Morton L. Wallerstein, executive secretary of the League of Virginia Municipalities, and Sergt. Miller. Police chiefs from throughout the State were invited to attend as guests.

Graduates Listed.

Zone police instructors, who will conduct training courses for police in their localities, and others who received certificates tonight indicating their completion of the training course were:

Sergt. H. E. Bondurant, of Newport News; C. O. Dennis, superintendent of police, Lynchburg; Sergt. Dan W. Duling, of Richmond; L. E. Greaver, patrolman, of Charlottesville; C. W. Hollis, chief of police, of Winchester; Sergt. Russell Lyday, of Staunton; Sergt. Miller, of Norfolk; Lieut. W. S. Newton, of Roanoke; Sergt. V. J. Payne, of Bristol; Lieut. William C. Games Between Traditional Rivals to Headline Grid Menu Today

25,000 to Converge on Annapolis Today for Battle of Pitt and Navy

Clean Slates Of 3 Teams At Stake

Princeton, Syracuse and Navy Facing Tests; Interest High.

Minnesota, Alabama and Stanford Favored to Continue Drives.

INTERSECTIONAL warfare gives way to traditional rivalry today along most of the country's far-flung battle front of college football, with the main national interest focused upon the fight of three unbeaten, untied Eastern aggregations to keep their banners from being abruptly hauled down from the heights, according to the Associated Press.

Generally speaking, in the South, Middle West and Far West, the chief championship contenders appear to have comparatively little to worry about, but the family row in the East reaches a grand climax with the perfect records of Princeton, Syracuse and the Navy at stake.

Remote Chance for Yale.

Yale has only a remote chance of upsetting the terrible Tigers in a renewal at Princeton of one of the Nation's oldest football rivalries, but Syracuse's fine team will be severely tested by Colgate's brilliant attack, one of the most baffling in the East, while Navy's sturdy, resourceful crew will be lucky to escape a trouncing at the hands of the powerful Pittsburgh Panthers.

Close to 50,000 may see Princeton "shoot the works" against the Elis. The margin isn't likely to be as great as it was last year, when the Tigers romped around the Yale Bowl to win by 27-to-2, but the Blue will need plenty of "breaks" to offset Princeton's vastly superior resources in man-power. Yale's main hope seems to rest in the passing arm of Quarter Back Jerry Roscoe.

Both Are Sell-Outs.

The Syracuse-Colgate and Navy-Pittsburgh games constitute a sacrifice on the altar of gate receipts. Both are sell-outs, with 30,000 packing Archbold Stadium at Syracuse and 25,000 jamming the stands at Annapolis, but each would likely cause the "S. R. O." sign to be hung out at the Yankee Stadium, which seats close to 80,000.

Not in a decade has up-State New York been worked up to such excitement as it has by this year's clash of the Orange powerhouse and the Maroon magicians. Colgate has been beaten once, by Ohio State, whereas Syracuse has romped over all its opposition, but previous performances generally can be tossed out the window when these ancient rivals meet. Syracuse, with a great line and well fortified in every department, has a burning desire to overthrow its rival for the first time since 1924—and may do it—but Colgate, powerful as well as versatile, appears to many to have the edge.

Plenty of Confidence.

The confidence of Pittsburgh's backers in a victory over Navy by three touchdowns may be just what the Midshipmen need to stir them up to even greater fighting pitch. They don't subscribe at Annapolis to the view that Navy has been a bit lucky to come through unscathed so far. This opportunist naval array includes plenty of confidence, as well as a sharp scoring punch, but it has not yet met anything as explosive as the Pitt powerhouse and it isn't likely to escape defeat. It will be a "moral" triumph for the Sailors if they can hold the Panthers to two touchdowns.

The other outstanding unbeaten teams of the country look to have the situation under better control. Even with Jay Berwanger back in the line-up, Chicago hasn't much chance or even hope of stopping the Minnesota juggernaut. Alabama should roll over Georgia Tech to keep alive its Rose Bowl prospects, Rice figures to remove Texas A. & M. from its path to the Southwest peak and Illinois should keep its slate clean against an improved Wisconsin outfit.

Meets Olympic Club.

Stanford, moving toward the Pacific Coast title as well as the Rose Bowl, steps out of the collegiate picture for the week to take on the tough Olympic Club of San Francisco, by way of tuning up for the "big game" with California.

Tulane and Louisiana State, rivals of Alabama for the Southeastern Conference crown, have the edge over Kentucky and Mississippi, respectively, though not by lopsided margins. The traditional Tennessee-Vanderbilt game at Nashville is the conference standout, with the Volunteers favored.

Duke, the favorite, may be lucky to escape an upset at the hands of North Carolina in the main engagement of the Southern Conference. Close to 30,000 at Chapel Hill will see North Carolina seek its first victory over the Blue Devils since 1929, with a fair chance of getting it and knocking Duke from the conference lead, now shared with Washington and Lee.

Michigan Is Underdog.

History will be written if, as seems quite likely, Michigan is soundly whipped by Ohio State's powerful team at Columbus. Never before have the Wolverines lost as many as six games or five conference contests in a single season, but they appear headed for a new "low" in both departments. The Buckeyes are top-heavy favorites to avenge last year's 14-0 setback.

Nebraska, if recovered from the bruising defeat by Pitt, should beat Kansas and keep the Big Six leadership, but the Huskers may be pressed. Meanwhile, Kansas State, although favored, runs the risk of being knocked out of the conference running by the dangerous Oklahomans.

Texas and Southern Methodist figure to turn the tables on Texas Christian and Arkansas, by way of squaring accounts for 1933 setbacks. In the Rocky Mountain area, Utah State should have no real trouble keeping in front at the expense of Colorado Mines, but Utah University probably will run into trouble against the Colorado Aggies. Washington State, co-leader with Stanford in the Pacific Coast Conference, is idle for the week.

Big Ten teams have yet to lose an intersectional engagement to the East this year. They hope to keep this record intact today when Purdue's "touchdown twins," Purvis and Carter, are turned loose against Fordham at the Polo Grounds, while Indiana entertains the fast University of Maryland aggregation. Purdue is a more pronounced favorite than Indiana.

Army expects to tune up for next week's battle with Notre Dame by playing the Citadel eleven, from Charleston, S. C.

Garden Forced To Free All Fighters

Contracts Ruled Invalid; Dempsey May Promote Next Baer Bout.

By Jack Miley.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (Spl.).—All fighters under contract to Madison Square Garden—including such well-known beat-busters as Max Baer, Steve Hamas, Art Lasky, Max Schmeling, Primo Carnera, Maxie Rosenbloom, Bob Olin and others, were given their freedom today in an emancipation proclamation issued by the New York Statae Athletic Commission, upon the advice of Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr.

Binders between these gladiators and the Garden were declared invalid by Bennett, who was asked by the commissioners to rule upon the legality of these hold-over agreements. The fighters involved were advised that neither the Garden nor its boxing promoter, James J. Johnston, can restrain them from offering their services to rival impresarios.

Baer Free to Negotiate.

Max Baer has been anxious to wriggle out of an option the Garden compelled him to give for the first defense of his world heavyweight championship title before he was signed for the Primo Carnera brawl in which he won the title. Now Bear is free to negotiate with others anxious to stage a championship brawl here next summer and the Garden management can not force Baer to obey the terms of a promise he made under duress.

Jack Dempsey, who staged the Baer-Schmeling brawl in association with Tim Mara, owner of the New York Giants pro football team, may now decide to give the Garden monopolists some keen competition by promoting another Baer fight in one of the New York baseball parks next June. The champion, it is generally known, has been anxious to sever relations with the Eighth avenue sport theater so that he may appear under the auspices of his old idol, Dempsey.

When the Garden was reluctant to cut Dempsey in on the profits of his fight with Carnera, Baer refused to consider the match until Dempsey was given a piece of the gate.

Shore Eleven May Revise Back Field

Shift Contemplated for Haverford Game.

Chestertown, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). When Washington College gridders meet Haverford College at Haverford tomorrow in the annual football game between the Eastern Shoremen and the Main Liners, Coach George Ekaitis may exhibit a new back field combination.

Ed Evans, lower Delaware southpaw and well-known baseball player of the Blue Hen State, is primed for a starting post.

Wilbert Huffman, of Cumberland, injured in the Hopkins and also in the Mount St. Mary's games, is back in uniform and will be ready if needed, but Coach Ekaitis is not planning to start him.

Detroit 'Farm' Signs Seaford Hurling Star

Seaford, Del., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—"Bob" Favinger, pitching ace of the Seaford Baseball Team for the last two seasons, has signed with the Charleroi team of the Pennsylvania State League, and will report next spring. The Charleroi team is a "farm" for the Detroit American League team.

Favinger, a product of the Seaford High School Team, where he made a fine record as a hurler, worked in 28 games last season, winning 23, tying 1 and losing 4. His average strike-out record was 13 per game.

Southeastern Grid Leaders Favorites

Alabama, Tulane, L. S. U. Expected to Remain Unbeaten Today.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 16 (AP). Unless there is a let-down somewhere along the line, Alabama, Tulane and Louisiana State seem headed for further triumphs tomorrow in their unbeaten parade in the Southeastern Conference.

The Crimson Tide rolled into Atlanta today and polished up its offensive weapons for the battle with Georgia Tech's crippled crew. Alabama ranked as a prime favorite to hang up its sixth conference victory and the seventh of the season.

Tulane invaded Lexington to meet Kentucky and advance dope conceded the Green Wave an edge over the Wildcats, although it might be forced to fight bitterly.

L. S. U. Heavy Choice.

The Tigers of Louisiana State are expected to take Mississippi handily at Jackson.

Although both teams have been defeated, Vanderbilt by Louisiana State, and Tennessee by Alabama, the thirtieth renewal of the traditional Volunteer-Commodore conflict at Nashville is likely to steal the show as far as spectacular fighting is concerned. Tennessee seems the logical choice because of superior man-power, yet this annual duel is always productive of surprises.

Florida and Auburn, fairly evenly matched machines, round out the intraconference program in a struggle at Montgomery.

Interleague warfare with the Southern Conference finds the Wolfpack of North Carolina State seeking to add another victory to the older loop's side in its encounter at Athens with Georgia. Each conference has seven triumphs in the book, but it looks as if the Bulldogs have hit their stride and are ready to send the Southeastern out in front.

Intersectional frays involving Southern elevens send the Citadel against the strong Army gridders at West Point and Centenary engages Baylor at Shreveport.

Juniors Want to Play.

The Takoma Northern Juniors, 115-pound team, want a game at Takoma Park Sunday. Call Coach R. E. Harris at Shepherd 1438, between 6 and 7 p. m.

Carding 158, McCarthy Wins Title

Dethrones Steward in 'Champions Tourney' by Two Strokes.

Holzberg Records 163; Only a Few Golfers Turn In Scores.

MARTIN F. M'CARTHY, Columbia golfer, played his first round in three weeks yesterday at Congressional Country Club, and won the "Champion of Champions" tournament with a 36-hole total of 158.

McCarthy nosed out Luther C. Steward, jr., host club titleholder, by 2 strokes after a thrilling stretch finish. Steward, leader in the morning round, scored 80, 80—160, while McCarthy, after taking 82 strokes in his first round, rallied in the afternoon for a creditable 76.

Only a handful of golfers turned in scores. John Holzberg, Indian Spring champion, shot 84, 79—163, and Frank C. Goodwin, jr., runner-up at Congressional, had 81, 83—164. Dr. Calvert E. Buck, Washington Golf and Country Club's titleholder, did an 89 in the morning, and picked up in the afternoon, while such stars as Eddie Bean and Jess Baggett, of Beaver Dam, withdrew.

Starts on Same Hole.

Last year Steward, defending "Champion of Champions," overtook McCarthy on the thirty-second hole in the battle at Kenwood. Yesterday, McCarthy, playing with Steward, started his whipping finish on the same hole. Here McCarthy made his par 3 to Steward's 4. Steward three-putted the thirty-third green for a 5, as McCarthy took a 4. On the thirty-fourth, Steward cracked his drive out of bounds and wound up with a 6, while McCarthy took a 5. They both shot the last two holes in even par—4-4.

McCarthy's margin of victory also might be attributed to his spectacular eagle deuce on the 445-yard second hole of the afternoon. On this hole he holed out a 245-yard spoon shot; Steward took a 5.

The new champion went to the third round of the National Amateur at Brookline this year.

John Connelly, District municipal golf champion, won the annual Washington Post tournament yesterday at Kenwood, by defeating Harris B. Hull, 2 and 1. Connelly took an early lead, and was 1 up at the turn. At the fifteenth Hull was 1 up, but Connelly flashed into full stride to end the battle on the seventeenth green.

A twisted ankle will keep Al Houghton, Kenwood pro, out of the game for a few weeks, it was learned yesterday. Houghton stumbled over some furniture in his home the day after he returned from Pinehurst.

Silver Spring Eleven To Play in Annapolis

The Silver Spring Merchants will seek State-wide attention tomorrow when they meet the Annapolis Coca Cola eleven at Annapolis.

The hosts boast several former college stars in their line-up, including Jack Norris, former Maryland U. star. The locals went on a scoring rampage last Sunday, routing Tenleytown A. C., 58 to 0.

All Navy-Pitt Tickets Sold, Scalpers Faced With Arrest

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 16 (AP).—With the Navy-Pittsburgh football game a sell-out, Naval Academy authorities today concentrated on the prevention of ticket scalping with the cooperation of the local, Baltimore and Federal authorities.

The ticket window at the Academy was closed today when a check showed that all of the 25,000 seats in the Thompson Stadium had been sold.

Lieut. Comdr. John H. Brown, jr., said the authorities were on the trail of ticket scalpers and also were watching for counterfeit tickets. He declared the sale of tickets above the quoted price of $1.10 and $2.20 is a violation of the Federal law.

"All tickets sold by the Academy are priced to include the Federal tax," he said. "When the price is raised by scalpers it constitutes an evasion of the Federal tax laws, and is, I understand, punishable by a term of about eight years."

Police Commissioner Charles E. Meyers, of Annapolis, declared that anyone offering tickets for sale here above the regular price would be arrested immediately.

A patrol of 90 or more sailors and marines will be on duty at the stadium and in the Academy grounds during the game. A group of 30 professional ushers has been employed to handle the seating of the crowd and check on the tickets.

W. & L. Choice Over W. & M. Today

Virginia Tech, Richmond Would Tie for Lead if Generals Bow.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—Several Old Dominion elevens will be "pulling" for William and Mary in the Indians' battle with Washington and Lee at Williamsburg tomorrow in the headlining attraction on the State's football bill.

If the Generals win—as they're favored to do—they'll carry away the Virginia championship for the second consecutive year, much to the chagrin of several other Old Dominion elevens, among them Richmond's Spiders and Virginia Tech's Gobblers.

Virginia Tech, if it can get by Virginia tomorrow in what should be a comparatively easy assignment, will join the Spiders in a tie for the league leadership—if the Indians upset Washington and Lee.

Meets Wake Forest.

The Spiders, with no more State games to worry them until Thanksgiving's meeting with the Indians at Richmond, plays Wake Forest. Under fair skies the Spiders are favored, but they'll probably have to use their passing attack to the best advantage and utilize all of their speed to get by the much heavier Deacon eleven.

V. M. I.'s ill-fated cadets, trying to score a victory to brace them for their Turkey Day meeting with V. P. I. at Roanoke, will meet Davidson's Wildcats at Davidson, while Emory and Henry's Wasps, closing out a creditable season, will meet Chattanooga at Johnson City.

Roanoke will face Baltimore College at Salem, Hampden-Sidney meets Swarthmore at Philadelphia, Randolph-Macon plays Gallaudet at Washington and Bridgewater meets Juniata at Huntington.

Charles Town Gridmen Upset Shepherdstown

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—The Charles Town High School eleven scored an upset Friday, overwhelming Shepherdstown High, 31 to 0.

Panthers 5-2 Choice Over Middies

Navy's 'Destiny Team' to Rely on Borries and Aerial Attack.

Sutherland Sends Pitt Through Last Drill at G. U. Field.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 16 (U.P.). Down here where the lazy Severn flows a Navy football team that twice has turned the "impossible" today cleared its decks for Pittsburgh. The game tomorrow will start at 2 p. m.

Long after dark the same team that turned back the Rose Bowl champions, Columbia and powerful Notre Dame in the course of compiling an all-winning record in seven tests toiled toward perfection.

Intricate passes, lightning laterals, spinners and reverses were gone over, again and again. Borries sprinted, Clark punted, and the line formed and re-formed.

In short, Navy, respectful of Pitt's power, left nothing undone looking toward the victory that every soul on this Government reservation confidently expects.

Experts Favor Pitt.

If Navy does it, it will be the major football feat of this year. Scarcely a football expert has predicted a Navy triumph over Munjas, Weinstock, Nicksick; Hartwig and the other Pittsburgh mighties who proved too powerful for Southern California, Notre Dame and Nebraska.

Pittsburgh will have all the physical advantages—age, weight, experience and reserve strength. Navy must rely on brains, speed, the superexcellence of Buzz Borries and a spirit that flames in the hearts of the Regiment.

This game which would have packed Pitt's home field, or Franklin Field Stadium in Philadelphia, each seating some 75,000, will be played at Thompson Stadium which, even with temporary construction, can care for but 25,000.

Tickets at Premium.

The result, of course, is a mad scramble for tickets here and in Baltimore, where scalpers are asking $5 for $1.10 seats, and finding a bullish market. Carvel Hall, the town's main hostelry, was packed to the eaves and veteran employes say they "never saw anything like it" the way they have had to turn down scores and scores of requests for accommodations.

Coach Jock Sutherland and his Pittsburgh squad bivouacked in Washington last night, prepared to advance on Annapolis by bus this morning. The Panthers unlimbered at Georgetown University Field yesterday in a two-hour practice, that was halted by dusk.

Pitt's first attempts to hold a secret drill were balked by the appearance of hundreds of fans attracted to the G. U. varsity field. Sutherland then took his squad to the comparative seclusion of the intra-mural field where all spectators were barred.

Reluctant to predict a victory, Sutherland would forecast only that Pitt expected a stubborn battle at Navy, pointing out that tales borne back to Pittsburgh by his scouts described Navy as probably the most versatile team the Panthers will meet all season.

Except for a leg injury now being nursed by Verne Baxter, regular right end, the Pitt squad is in top physical condition. Baxter is not expected to play in the game today, and will be replaced by Vincent Sites.

C. U. Favored Today Over S. Dakota

Catholic Faces Big Foe in Final Home Game of 1934 Season.

THE last game for local consumption on Catholic University's football schedule will be served this afternoon at Griffith Stadium beginning at 2 o'clock, with South Dakota University as the opposition. C. U. is rated an overwhelming favorite.

For eight C. U. seniors, today's game is their last for alma mater before District fandom. Next week they hang up their cleats after digging into Duquesne at Pittsburgh. But the swan song of the octet will not be sung together. Only three seniors are scheduled to start, because Head Coach Dutch Bergman is breaking in sophomore talent for next year.

Capt. Bill Conter heads the departing delegation. The others are Gene Augusterfer, Red Fleming, Ed Thibodeau, Tom and Babe Gearty, Tom Oliver and Danny Pyne.

Defeats by Holy Cross and Western Maryland have keyed Catholic's fighting spirit to white heat and with true Gaelic determination they are out to finish the season with victories over South Dakota and Duquesne. Today's game will be played with one eye cocked inquisitively at the Dukes' struggle with Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh. C. U. scouts by the legion have been assigned to the game.

South Dakota will resemble a small beef trust when it lines up with a line averaging 205 pounds. In the back field, however, conditions are reversed. The small Coyote backs register an average of 152 pounds. Their lack of heft is offset by speed and a wide-open offense.

Mel and Mar McNickle, twin brothers playing half backs for the invaders, are the stars of the outfit. They kick, run and pass the ball and do it well enough to assure C. U.'s secondary of some anxious moments.

Three sophomores are slated to start in the Redbird back field, Bill Adamaitis and Al Secino, halves, and Bob Makofske, full.

Bruce Soccerites Eye Second Tourney Game

Westernport, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Bruce High of the Western Maryland Interscholastic Soccer League, which was undefeated this year and which eliminated Kitzmiller, Garrett County champion, in the first round of the State tournament, will meet the victor of the Hancock-Emmitsburg game at Hancock Saturday, November 24.

Friends Victor, 13 to 7.

Punching over a touchdown in the final period, after its opponent had come from behind into a 7-to-6 lead, Friends School topped the Western Lightweights yesterday, 13 to 7. Ben Davis, a substitute full back, made the winning score.

Last Time, Meade Up, Scores Head Victory at Bowie Track Before 7,000 Fans

Gunwale II Fades After Fast Pace

Swatter Returns $82.80 in Third; Easiest Way Victor in Sixth.

By Walter Haight.

THE Black and Yellow of Dr. J. Fred Adams, seldom seen in a race these days and rarely in the winner's circle, were borne to victory at Bowie yesterday afternoon. The horse was Last Time, ridden by Jockey Don Meade, and he rushed to the wire a mere head in front of E. K. Bryson's Gunwale. A length farther back came Little Dinah, half of the Labrot entry.

Coupled with Peeper, Little Dinah had been the magnet for some of the most brisk betting of the meeting. The crowds gathered at the windows early and the Labrot entry shrunk to a mere 1-to-4 on the approximate odds boards.

Few Flashes of Speed.

The favorite betters then gathered at points of visage and saw only a few flashes of speed from the generally dependable Labrot horses. Little Dinah saved just a few scraps of the heavy money by sneaking into third position.

Bowie again was blessed with ideal racing weather. A strong afternoon sun lent a touch of Miami to the scene. However, the crowd was only in the neighborhood of 7,000.

The feature was named "The Frances Nicholson." Many of the favorite players were of the opinion that "Jesse James" would have been more suitable. Notwithstanding, it was a "hoss" race.

Gunwale was first to show in front and Peeper, of the Labrot pair, tried to run him off his hoofs. However, it was Peeper which stopped and Gunwale went on to set a fast pace. Last Time had only Disruption beaten at the stretch turn, but Meade was only biding his time.

Once straightened out in the dash for the wire, Last Time moved along with leaps and bounds to collar Gunwale in a slashing head-and-head duel.

Liberty Oak Victor.

A thrilling nose finish greeted the crowd with the running of the first race. Liberty Oak was the winner, and again Silvio Coucci had the victorious mount in the opening event. It was Coucci's riding and the courage of the son of Camp Fire that decided the issue. Anna V. L. was second and Immune third in the field of 11. Liberty Oak and Immune battled for most of the 6 furlongs, but a closing rush of Anna V. L. put her just a nog in back of the winner at the wire. Liberty Oak paid $13.60.

The favorite players filled the machine with money on Marwee and she responded with a smashing race that found her scoring by a length and a half over Sun Way. Lealette was third, three lengths farther away. Fan set the early pace and appeared in the act of stealing the purse. However, he faded when Marwee came around the field shortly after entering the stretch. Marwee's pay-off was $3.30.

Pays $82.80 Mutuel.

Two turf veterans teamed to produce an $82.80 mutuel in the third race. The horse was Swatter and the jockey was Sammy Renick. They scored a half-length decision over Resurrection and Xandra. Stone Martin and Triangular were nowhere at the finish, although the former set a fast pace for most of the route. Swatter trailed the field until well along the back stretch, where he suddenly found speed and gradually wore down the field.

Silvio Coucci rode his second good-priced winner in the fourth race, bringing Canterboy home two lengths in advance of Twoaday and Scotch Queen, the latter a 74-1 shot which paid $23.20 to show. Canterboy led the field all the way with the exception of a short interval at the start when Alwintour held sway.

Easiest Way was an easy winner in the sixth, galloping down the stretch with yards of daylight between him and Fairly Wild. Major General was third. The unfashionable Seabo rode Easiest Way and his appearance helped inflate the mutuel, which was $13.80.

Potion, the favorite, won the seventh, with Repeal second and Retribution third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIBERTY OAK, $13.60, $6.30, $3.90; ANNA V. L., $5.00, $3.60; IMMUNE, $4.30.

LIBERTY OAK, hard ridden in the early stages to maintain a brief lead while on the inside of IMMUNE, held on stoutly after relinquishing command entering the home stretch, then came again to get up in the concluding strides. ANNA V. L. fell back midway of the curve, but came with a belated rush when finding racing room next the inner rail during the stretch drive. IMMUNE forced a fast pace from the beginning, gained a slight lead in the closing furlong, but failed to rally right at the end. PRYOR followed close to the leaders, and held on strongly. TULLIHOO showed a good effort. CALORIC lacked early speed. LADY HOCKBERGER was never a factor.

SECOND RACE—One mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; maidens. For all ages. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:38. Off at 1:39. Winner, Mrs. F. A. Clark's b. f. (4), by Wrack—Robinetta. Trained by E. Young. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:43 3-5, 1:49 3-5.

GOOSE CREEK	107	9	6	8d	10	10	10	10	Critchfield	96.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARWEE, $3.30, $2.30, $2.40; SUN WAY, $3.30, $2.60; LEALETTE, $3.00.

MARWEE, sluggish and badly outrun in the early stages, was taken wide while bettering his position in the last half-mile, came strongly to dispose of the leaders at the final furlong pole, then drew out under pressure. SUN WAY worked his way up stoutly after a slow beginning, and finished with good courage on the outside. LEALETTE was hard ridden for the entire trip. APPEAR went forwardly and held on willingly in the closing drive. AZZULIKIT dropped back after reaching the back stretch, but came again at the end. EGEON went evenly. FAN stopped badly after opening up a long lead. THREE GRAND had no excuses.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:08. Off at 2:10. Winner, Branncastle Farm's b. h. (7), by Broomstick—Gadfly. Trained by R. Roberts. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:42 3-5, 1:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWATTER, $82.80, $38.60, $15.10; RESURRECTION, $10.20, $6.50; XANDRA, $4.60.

SWATTER, badly outrun for the first six furlongs and going in his best form, circled his company rapidly in the last half-mile, then closed with a rush, to get up in the last fifty yards. RESURRECTION, kept in the first flight from the beginning, continued resolutely after wearing STONE MARTIN down inside the final furlong. XANDRA came determinedly during the stretch run. TRIANGULAR, poorly handled and messed about in the early stages, closed fast when taken to the inside during the stretch drive. CHATTERDOO weakened. STONE MARTIN tired suddenly during the stretch drive, after holding a safe early lead. GALYARROW was done after six furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:41. Winner, H. Dongan's b. g. (2), by Canter—Comice. Trained by J. J. Barker. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 1-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTERBOY, $18.40, $7.60, $4.40; TWOADAY, $6.80, $5.00; SCOTCH QUEEN, $23.20.

CANTERBOY went around the leader with a rush when leaving the back stretch, opened up a winning lead when straightened out for the closing drive, then had enough in reserve to withstand TWOADAY. Latter worked her way up on the outside, and came willingly under a drive. SCOTCH QUEEN followed close to the leaders, saved ground on the stretch turn to finish on the inside, and barely lasted for third. BE MINE finished with good courage. SHOW BOY lacked early speed. UNCLE BILLY was held safe. DIVERTING failed to respond when shaken up. ALWINTOUR stopped badly. LITTLE LIE raced far below her true form.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Francis Nicholson; allowances. For 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:08½. Winner, J. F. Adams' ch. f. (2), by Happy Time—Jagulite. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49, 1:14 3-5.

†S. W. Labrot entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAST TIME, $13.90, $10.10, $2.70; GUNWALE, $10.80, $2.90; LITTLE DINAH (entry), $2.10.

LAST TIME, forced to secure racing room on the outside from the beginning, came stoutly in the last half-mile, then held to a slight lead gamely in the closing furlong. GUNWALE continued resolutely after racing PEEPER into submission. LITTLE DINAH, taken up when the break came, was sent up on the inside approaching the home stretch, but weakened after making a stout effort. PEEPER was used up racing GUNWALE, and he tired. MEMORABLE went well placed, but was not good enough. DISRUPTION was outrun badly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 3:40. Winner, Ascot Stable's br. g. (3), by Wayward—Free and Easy. Trained by J. Hogan. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 4-5, 1:47 3-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EASIEST WAY, $13.80, $11.80, $6.10; FAIRLY WILD, $4.00, $3.30; MAJOR GENERAL, $3.60.

EASIEST WAY, going improved and never far from the leaders while full of run, took command at his leisure when reaching the final turn, then drew out at will in the final drive. FAIRLY WILD, shuffled back going to the first turn, was steered extremely wide, then circled his field to close in immense run. MAJOR GENERAL went strongly from the beginning, and held on well nearing the finish. RED ROAMER, bettered his position steadily, but could not threaten the leaders. FREE had speed in spots. THUNDERTONE weakened and may have needed this race. BLACK FALCON was used to setting the pace. LAST ROMANCE was never a factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:22½. Winner, F. Gilpin's ch. g. (3), by Pot au Feu—Peace and Plenty. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:15, 1:43, 1:57 2-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POTION, $6.50, $5.20, $3.70; REPEAL, $22.30, $12.00; RETRIBUTION, $6.30.

POTION, taken under steadying restraint until midway of the back stretch, went to the leaders with good speed when placed to a drive, then held REPEAL safe after taking command. REPEAL raced PROTAGONIST into submission, saved ground, but was unable to withstand the winner. RETRIBUTION went forwardly, and closed with good energy. KOZAK closed a big gap from a slow beginning. MARCELLA H. could not threaten the leaders. TRIOLET lacked early speed, then could not reach a forward position. STURDY ARK stopped after six furlongs. PROTAGONIST displayed good speed early.

30,000 to See Syracuse Tilt

Odds Favor Colgate; Both Elevens Are Primed.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 16 (AP).—Football enthusiasts from all parts of the East and many other sections of the Nation began pouring into Syracuse today to witness undefeated and united Syracuse University's battle with the Magicians, of Colgate, here tomorrow.

Odds in favor of Colgate stood at 8½ to 5 in New York today and 10 to 8 in Syracuse and central New York.

Only slight changes in formations and plays were made by Coach Vic Hanson of the Orange this week, the preparation being about the same as that made for Brown, Penn State and Michigan State.

Each squad enters the game with full strength, a markedly unusual situation, both coaches pointed out.

Last-minute information from the athletic officer of each university revealed that 30,000 tickets had been sold, leaving only field stands for late comers.

Stocks Weaken After 5-Point Drop in Phones

Market Recovers Balance Near Close; Trading, 1,032,170 Shares.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—A 5-point decline in American Telephone moderately unsettled the stock market today.

Selling was general for a while in the forenoon, as Telephone took the skids to a new low for the year, but the market recovered its balance before the close. Final losses, on the whole, were small.

Weakness in American Telephone, which spread to other communication and utility shares, was regarded as an aftermath of the move at Washington for an inquiry into the company's affairs, announced yesterday.

Industrial Stocks Resist.

Industrial stocks on the average offered stanch resistance to pressure, especially after the news the Standard Oil of New Jersey planned to retire $90,000,000 in debentures. Standard of New Jersey rallied for a net fractional gain and scattered issues through the list breasted the lower trend to finish higher.

Although trading was active during the early decline, volume for the day dropped to 1,032,170 shares, compared with 1,554,230 in the preceding session. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks was five-tenths of a point lower, at 72.9.

Better quotations for foreign currencies hinted subsidence of fears over the position of the European gold bloc, with the prospect the gold flow toward New York would diminish.

Phone Closes Near Low.

American Telephone shares closed at 104½, around the low for the day.

With President Roosevelt's journey to the Tennessee Valley focusing attention on utility problems, power shares dragged along bottom levels for the year. Consolidated Gas dropped more than a point to the lowest quotation recorded in more than ten years. It finished at 22½. The preferred sold off 2 points, also to a new low.

Western Union lost more than a point in sympathy with the decline in the telephone issue.

Some Reluctant to Sell.

Impressed by additional indications of a trend toward improvement in business, traders were reluctant to follow up selling in the industrial groups. American Can, Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, General Electric and other prominent issues were unchanged or off only fractions at the closing gong.

Spiegel-May-Stern, a mail order issue, spurted 4 points to a 1934 peak in fairly active trading. Most stocks or shares with extremely thin markets. Airplane issues turned upward in late trading, United Aircraft gaining more than a point.

Sustained improvement in retail trade was considered the most convincing evidence that business slowly was climbing the uphill road. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. estimated retail volume for the entire country the past week was 15 to 20 per cent in excess of the like period last year.

Advice Offered Those Who Seek Shielding Against Inflation Losses Is No Aid in Investment Problems of Persons With Limited Means.

(By Special Writer of The Post.)

The kind of advice offered to those who seek protection against the losses due to inflation is not very helpful in meeting the investment problems of persons with limited means. The inexperienced investors who constitute the bulk of the savings banks depositors and insurance policy holders of the country have neither the knowledge nor the resources that would enable them to diversify their holdings judiciously with a view to protecting themselves against inflation. They may fully understand the danger of holding cash or retaining fixed interest securities when prices are rising rapidly and the purchasing power of money is diminishing.

But for most of them it is probably safer to gamble on the future purchasing power of the dollar than it is to speculate in common stocks, commodities, or real estate, even if they have the means for so doing.

That opinion is confirmed by reading a study called "Inflation and the Investor," by E. W. Axe and R. E. Houghton. These statisticians have not only made a careful analysis of the means of protection, which an investor may employ to safeguard his principal in periods of inflation, but they have tested the validity of their advice by showing what would have happened to a German or a French investor during the post-war years of inflation if he had diversified his investments according to their formula instead of holding bonds and cash. The results are extremely interesting because they prove that even the complete collapse of the German currency did not necessarily result in the ruin of the investor.

Gold Investment Fund Value Would Have Been Reduced.

Messrs. Axe and Houghton start by assuming that a German with a given sum to invest in 1918, put 20 per cent of it in domestic bonds or currency, 20 per cent in domestic stocks, 20 per cent in commodities, 20 per cent in foreign bonds and 20 per cent in foreign stocks. These assumptions are decidedly hypothetical because in January, 1918, it would have been impossible for many Germans to purchase some of the property in question. However, from the view-point of the American investor, it is of interest to learn what steps might have been taken in the absence of war-inherited restrictions to guard against currency depreciation.

The authors estimate that during the first three years the gold value of the German investment fund would have been reduced by nearly half, whereas if the fund had been invested in high-grade obligations payable in cash, its value would have declined 92 per cent by that time. As distinguished from its gold value, the purchasing power of the fund measured by the general level of wholesale commodity prices would have fallen only slightly. By 1925, after the old mark had become worthless and been superseded, the gold value of the fund would have been only 27 per cent below what it was in 1918, and its purchasing power but slightly less. By taking other years as the starting point, still different results would have been obtained. In all cases, however, if the fund had been invested in cash or claims to cash the investor would have been completely wiped out.

On the basis of the German analysis and a similar investigation for France the authors conclude that by diversifying investments in the manner suggested an investor "could certainly have protected himself against serious loss in these two inflations, while had he left his fund in cash or in high garde domestic bonds he would in the case of France have suffered very severe loss and in Germany complete ruin." Applying these conclusions to the United States, it is said that the present situation in this country seems more favorable to the application of the suggested methods than the conditions prevailing during the German and French inflation. To this, however, it may be replied that the writers are suggesting that investors assume new and novel risks as an alternative to chancing the unpredictable losses of possible future inflation.

Without Skilled Advice Losses Would Be Great.

Without skilled investment advice, losses due to poor judgment in buying common stocks or commodities might easily far exceed the losses suffered through extreme currency depreciation. The wide fluctuations in prices of individual stocks and commodities make such purchases highly speculative for the uninitiated. Real estate, while recommended for long-term investment, was not considered in the German and French studies because no reliable index of the general average of real estate prices was available for either country during the period in question.

It can not be too strongly emphasized that all these computations are based on averages which conceal fluctuations that might spell ruin for investors who tried to follow the general diversification advised. By their cautious reservations, the authors clearly reveal the dangers of loss inherent in their protective program, and its limited value for persons with small means. Not only do they urge careful study of the supply and demand outlook for any commodities bought, but they stress the need of constant shifts in the composition of the fund as the outlook changes. Such changes are essential in ordinary times, to be sure, but the savings bank depositor and the investor with small means are seldom competent to make independent decisions. Protective measures such as those advised are likely, therefore, to involve too great chances of loss to be a practicable kind of insurance against an inflationary hazard which is itself indeterminate.

Bond Market Is Unchanged At 84.4 Level

Federal Securities Strong; Sales Volume Rises to $14,145,000.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Continued strength of United States Government securities today helped to cover up, in some degree, irregularities prevailing elsewhere in the bond market.

While there were numerous minor gains in company loans, various prime as well as secondary utilities and rails were heavy. Mixed movements also appeared in the foreign division although a number of new highs for the year were recorded in this department.

Transfers totaled $14,145,000, par value, against $12,751,000 yesterday, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 84.4.

Home Loans.

Home Loan 2¾s at 95.25 were up eight-thirty-seconds to a record high and gains throughout the remainder of this list ranged from two-thirty-seconds to ten-thirty-seconds of a point. Home loan issues were the most active. The turnover in Governments amounted to about $3,030,000 compared with $3,040,000 Thursday.

The important bond news of the day was the announcement by the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, that it was calling its $90,000,000 of 5 per cent debentures on February 1, next, through the aid of bank loans and privately placed new debentures.

The listed 5s, callable at 102 and interest, were off ⅝ of a point at 102⅞. The Consolidated Gas Co., of Baltimore, also announced a refunding operation involving some $18,000,000.

Selling of Utilities.

Selling in some of the utilities was based largely on the order of the communications commission for an investigation of the American Telephone Co. and the recent New York power authority report suggesting a cut in rates of nearly 50 per cent.

Among some of the principal losers were American Telephone 5½s, off 1, at 111¼; American Water Works 5s, off 1½, at 97½; Baltimore & Ohio refunding 6s, off 1¼, at 76¾; Chicago & North Western general 5s, off 1, at 61½; Consolidated Gas 4½s, off 1½, at 99; International Telephone convertible 4½s, off 1, at 63½; New Orleans Public Service 5s, off 1¼, at 57; New Haven collateral 6s, off 4½, at 59; Portland General Electric 4½s, off 2⅛, at 48⅞, and Western Union 5s, off 1, at 100¼.

Curb Trading Is Irregular; Volume Falls

Some Specialties Climb; Transfers Decline to 178,000 Shares.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Irregular price changes were recorded in somewhat less active trading on the curb exchange today. Utilities experienced some further pressure. Active industrials were generally narrow.

The trend was erratic throughout the session. A few specialties showed independent strength. Metals were steadier following their easiness yesterday.

Heaviness in the utility shares on the big board was a disturbing factor. Electric Bond & Share sold down to $8, a new low for the year. Commonwealth Edison and United Gas preferred dipped around a point each, but American Gas & Electric was resistant.

Armstrong Cork and Royal Typewriter were up more than a point each. American Cyanamid B, Creole Petroleum, Lake Shore, Sherwin Williams and Wright Hargreaves rule about even at the finish. Philip Morris, Swift Internacionale and Hiram Walker sold slightly lower. Aluminum Co. of America sagged nearly two points.

Transfers approximated 178,000 shares compared with 212,000 yesterday.

Week's Revenue Freight Loads Are Decreased by 17,525 Cars

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended November 10 totaled 594,932 cars, a decrease of 17,525 cars below the preceding week but increases of 11,859 cars above the corresponding week in 1933 and 58,245 cars above the corresponding week in 1932, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

The level of loadings for the week of November 10 was somewhat below the preceding week due to Election Day.

Miscellaneous frieght loading for the week ended November 10 totaled 224,201 cars, a decrease of 10,817 cars below the preceding week, but 18,120 cars above the corresponding week in 1933, and 36,964 cars above the corresponding week in 1932.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 160,588 cars, a decrease of 1,949 cars below the preceding week this year, 5,515 cars below the corresponding week in 1933, and 8,991 cars below the same week in 1932.

Coal Loads Increase.

Coal loading amounted to 125,403 cars, increases of 1,115 cars above the preceding week, 2,867 cars above the corresponding week in 1933, and 11,795 cars above the same week in 1932.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 27,251 cars, a decrease of 619 cars below the preceding week, and 670 cars below the corresponding week in 1933, but 2,147 cars above the same week in 1932. In the Western districts alone grain and grain products loading for the week ended November 10 totaled 16,786 cars, a decrease of 1,353 cars below the same week in 1933.

Livestock loading amounted to 23,055 cars, a decrease of 1,502 cars below the preceding week, but increases of 1,140 cars above the same week in 1933 and 4,752 cars above the same week in 1932. In the Western districts alone loading of livestock for the week ended November 10 totaled 17,369 cars, an increase of 281 cars above the same week in 1933.

Forest products loading totaled 21,380 cars, a decrease of 260 cars below the preceding week, and 2,610 cars below the same week in 1933, but an increase of 5,412 cars above the same week in 1932.

Ore Loading Drops.

Ore loading amounted to 7,486 cars, a decrease of 3,221 cars below the preceding week, and 1,243 cars below the corresponding week in 1933, but an increase of 4,691 cars above the corresponding week in 1932.

Coke loading amounted to 5,568 cars, a decrease of 272 cars below the preceding week, and 230 cars below the same week in 1933, but an increase of 1,475 cars above the same week in 1932.

All districts except the Central-western, which showed a reduction, reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight for the week ended November 10, compared with the corresponding week in 1933. All districts, except the Southwestern, which showed a small reduction, reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1932.

The Securities and Exchange Commission is organizing a school for its "detectives."

Although the commission doesn't like to call them that, officials admit their efforts to blast out security fraud usually require considerable detective talent.

The staff of investigators is being given lessons in technical operations of the market and advice as to how to deal with offenders. This is on the premise that it is one thing to approach a firm which reacts cooperatively, and quite another to invade a bucket shop.

The instructions will be to take "gloves off" in the latter case. And it is understood the gloves have been taken off already in some cases not yet made public.

The commission wants its investigators to know about margins and to understand the other technical situations it must confront. Supervision of the security business involves not only the relatively simple attack on the bucket shop, but also sometimes extremely involved and delicate manipulative operations.

To date the commission has found little wrong-doing of the latter character. A few apparent pools have been the subject of inquiry, but investigation was revealed that normal circumstances caused what at first appeared to be manipulative operations.

The commission's investigators have established a liaison with the New York State enforcement staff, and will exchange information freely with it. When a case is purely within New York, or any other State, the commission lacks jurisdiction.

London—Trading on the stock exchange yesterday was quiet and irregular. Industrial shares were the strong feature owing to investment buying with the overflow funds from profit-taking of gilt-edged securities. Japanese and German bonds and Kaffirs were cheerful, while Bulgarian bonds were weak on plans to cancel debt service. Oil shares were easy. The closing tone was irregular.

Paris—Rentes led the advance in a strong session on the bourse today. Bank stocks and industrial issues gained sharply. The closing was strong.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse continued their downward trend, bonds, however, holding firmer. The closing was inactive.

Wheat Turns Easy While Corn Mounts

Cotton Prices Advance 2 to 4 Points; Market Is Less Active.

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP).—Corn prices here ran up 2 cents a bushel today, outdoing previous top records this season, but yet ruling far below peaks achieved at rural points.

Among the chief factors responsible for new strength of the corn market were reports that farmers in at least some sections had been paid prices equal to more than $1 a bushel for corn on track in Chicago. Another reason for corn market strength was removal of hedges here against liberal purchases of cash corn now in the East.

Profit-taking on corn price advances led to setbacks, and corn closed irregular at ½ cent decline to 1⅝ cents gain; May, 84 to 84⅛, with wheat easy ⅜ to ¼ down; May, 99½ to 99⅝; oats, ¼ off to ⅜ up, and provisions varying from 5 cents loss to a rise of 2 cents.

Soaring of corn added another day of new highs to the season record, making the thirteenth peak reached on the present upward movement of quotations.

Cotton Market

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Cotton was less active today and prices moved within a range of 8 or 9 points, with reactions from an early advance followed by renewed steadiness in the late trading. The market closed steady at net advances of 2 to 4 points.

After an early advance of 4 to 7 points, support became thin. December sold from 12.34 to 12.26 and May from 12.45 to 12.36, making net losses of 7 to 9 points on active months, but there was very little Southern selling in evidence and prices firmed up later on renewed covering and trade buying.

Houses with both Liverpool and continental connections were said to be among the early buyers, presumably on the differences.

Exports today 24,053, making 1,678,794 so far this season. Port receipts 40,890. United States port stocks 3,158,737.

Canada Gains Orders In Construction Industry

New York, Nov. 16.—The autumn revival in general business is now clearly shown as confined largely to the domestic market, and to the secondary industries with the exception of construction. The stimulating forces in the national economy are therefore of a different character from those of a year ago when a buoyant export trade was the major influence. The remarkable feature is not so much the change from external to internal forces of recovery, as that Canadian export trade, though showing some weakening tendencies in recent months, has displayed a stability at least equal to that in world trade.

If, however, a recent seasonal upturn in world industry is of the usual duration—in other words, if it is not checked by political and monetary disturbances, as was the industrial revival of last spring—it seems reasonable to expect that Canadian exportable products will find a wider market.

Wool Goods Trade Shows Steady Gain

Prices Display Advancing Tendency During Week, Report States.

New York, Nov. 16.—Business in wool goods market continued to show steady improvement last week, according to a report issued by the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. Prices displayed an advancing tendency. At least ten leading worsted mills have withdrawn prices in the last few days for the purpose of readjustment.

The few that issued new lists announced advances of 5 cents to 7½ cents a yard over the previous levels. Prices on women's wear fabrics steadied as a result of a sudden and brisk demand for cloakings and dress goods for immediate delivery. The demand came as a result of greatly improved sales of garments at retail.

Lower temperatures, and snow in many parts of the country, stimulated the call for winter wearing apparel last week, with the result that wool goods mills were able to clear stocks of remaining fall and winter goods at the most satisfactory prices in years.

"The worsted section of the industry is busier now than it has been in more than a year," says the Exchange Service. "Men's wear mills in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and other States have accepted about all of the business they can take care of in the next two to three months. A number of plants have fully sold their production to early February. Woolen mills are busy on sports wear fabrics for spring. Women's wear mills will open spring lines shortly.

"The business on its books is generally more satisfactory than it has been in some months. Orders taken so far, however, are considered profitless, although commitments accepted from now on are expected to show a slight profit as a result of recent advances.

The labor situation appears settled, and not a single strike or walk-out has been reported for some weeks. Employment is increasing, and in some of the smaller centers a shortage of help is reported."

PIANO—Knabe, medium-sized upright in new piano condition, $450. The new price is $875 so this piano is a value at the price we're asking. Pay $5 down. Kitt's.

PIANO—You can buy a brand-new, latest-model Knabe baby grand for $785; the lowest price in 18 years. Prospective fine piano purchasers should take advantage of this new price now, as it will probably go up in a very short time. Homer L. Kitt Co., 1330 G st.

PIANO—We have a splendid little Chickering baby grand; slightly used; that we are offering at the reduced price of $560. This instrument is very modern, and is finished in a beautiful satin mahogany. New it sold for $1,375, and considering how little it has been used it's a real value at the price we're asking. See this grand today. Kitt's, 1330 G st.

PIANO—We have a fine, little Colonial model baby grand, just repossessed, that can be bought by simply assuming the unpaid notes of $12.50 monthly. This piano is one of the better makes and is exactly as if new. The total price is $462; substantially less than the new price. Seldom are we able to offer such value in a really fine piano. See it. Homer L. Kitt Co., 1330 G st. nw.

PIANO—Fischer mahogany finished Ampico in good condition; $395. An unusual value considering that new this piano sold for $1,050; guaranteed and for sale complete with music rolls and bench. Pay $5 down, balance monthly. Kitt's, 1330 G st.

PIANO—Here's a good buy in a baby grand; a late model, mahogany finished piano just traded in on a new Knabe, and is now for sale at $240. Good for years of efficient service. Pay $3 down, balance monthly. Kitt's, 1330 G st.

PIANO—Hallett & Davis midget grand, in good condition. A splendid little instrument for the small home. Unusual at $185. Pay $3 down and $3 monthly. Kitt's, 1330 G st.

PIANO—We have a repossessed apartment upright, one of the latest models and in splendid condition, that can be purchased by any one who will continue the remaining weekly payments of $2, totaling $170. An unusual bargain for some one. Homer L. Kitt Co., 1330 G st.

POSTads pull. Phone National 4200.

PIANOS—Don't buy any used grand, upright or player until you've had the opportunity to see and compare our complete stock of "Remade Pianos"—instruments we have put through as many as 10 rebuilding processes to assure the purchaser of the best possible tone and appearance in a used piano. Prices are lower, quality considered. Grands, $185 up; uprights, $50 up. Homer L. Kitt Co., 1330 G st.

PIANOS FOR RENT—Up., $3.50 and $4 mo. Finest rental stock in Washington. NA. 3659. W. W. Kimball Co., 721 11th nw.

PIANO—Another real value in a repossessed baby grand. A beautiful little instrument designed in a plain, modern style and finished in a lustrous mahogany. This piano is for sale for the actual balance due on account of $288 (weekly notes of $2.50). One of the latest models, and we don't believe it can be told from new. See this value. Homer L.
